Communicable Crises Deborah E. Gibbons, 2007-03-01 This volume makes a significant contribution to the crisis management literature It also adds to our inchoate understanding of network governance temporary teams and task forces communities of practice alliances and virtual organizations It hints that the distinction between networks and organizations may be somewhat spurious a matter of degree rather than kind Indeed it seems that this distinction may derive more from mental models in which we consistently reify organizations than anything else Finally the volume emphasizes the functional importance of leadership in network governance and puzzles over its provision in the absence of hierarchy As such it adds to the contributions made by Marc Granovetter 1973 John Seeley Brown and Paul Duguid 1991 Bart Nooteboom 2000 Paul J DiMaggio 2001 John Arquilla and David Ronfeldt 2001 Laurence O Toole and Ken Meier 2004 and others as well as Nancy Roberts seminal work on wicked problems and hastily formed teams The result is a product the editor and the contributors can be proud of Overall it is one that will edify surprise and delight its readers knowledge production and legitimation operate in global epidemics the roles that professionals and professional communicators as well as individual citizens play in the communication process points of contention within these processes and possible entry points for ethical and civic intervention Focusing on the rhetorical interactions among the World Health Organization the United States China and Canada Rhetoric of a Global Epidemic investigates official communication and community grassroots risk tactics employed during the SARS outbreak It consists of four historical cases which examine the transcultural risk communication about SARS in different geopolitical regions at different stages The first two cases deal with risk communication practices at the early stage of the SARS epidemic when it originated in southern China The last two cases move to transcultural rhetorical networks surrounding SARS With such threats as SARS avian flu and swine flu capturing the public imagination and prompting transnational public health preparedness efforts the need for a rhetoric of global epidemics has never been greater Government leaders public health officials health care professionals journalists and activists can learn how to more effectively craft and manage transcultural risk communication from Ding's examination of the complex and varied modes of communication around SARS In addition to offering a detailed case study Rhetoric of a Global Epidemic provides a critical methodology that professional communicators can use in their investigations of epidemics and details approaches to facilitating more open participatory risk communication at all levels

Learning from SARS Institute of Medicine, Board on Global Health, Forum on Microbial Threats, 2004-04-26 The emergence of severe acute respiratory syndrome SARS in late 2002 and 2003 challenged the global public health community to confront a novel epidemic that spread rapidly from its origins in southern China until it had reached more than 25 other countries within a matter of months. In addition to the number of patients infected with the SARS virus, the disease had profound economic and political repercussions in many of the affected regions. Recent reports of isolated new SARS cases and a fear that the disease could reemerge and spread have put public health officials on high alert for any indications of possible new outbreaks. This report examines the response to SARS by public health systems in individual countries, the biology of the SARS coronavirus and related coronaviruses in animals, the economic and political fallout of the SARS epidemic, quarantine law and other public health measures that apply to combating infectious diseases, and the role of international organizations and scientific cooperation in halting the spread of SARS. The report provides an illuminating survey of findings from the epidemic along with an assessment of what might be needed in order to contain any future outbreaks of SARS or other emerging infections.
