In his opening remarks, the Proposer outlines one of the biggest problems facing the Irish commonwealth: women beggars are everywhere in the streets, and many of them have children whom they cannot support. If nothing is done, these children, like their parents, will end up begging in the streets as well. But the Proposer claims to have a plan that will ensure that all the poor children of Ireland grow up to become contributing members of society.
The Proposer claims to have devoted years of careful thought to this problem. He has weighed the many other plans proposed by civic-minded gentlemen like himself, but has found these plans insufficient, their "computations" inaccurate. To offer a corrective, the Proposer makes some computations of his own. The cost of supporting a child for one year is about two

1	2			In these opening paragraphs, the Proposer comes off as fairly sincere—he is an earnest, concerned citizen, and the problems he describes are indeed serious. In fact, it's a little hard to tell whether there is any significant difference between the Proposer and the real writer, Jonathan Swift.
