The Socialist Good Life Cristofer Scarboro, Diana Mincyte, Zsuzs Gille, 2020-06-02 First class rigorously researched richly documented and thought provoking essays on the consumer experience in socialist Eastern Europe Graham H Roberts author of Material Culture in Russia and the USSR As communist regimes denigrated Western countries for widespread unemployment and consumer excess socialist Eastern European states simultaneously legitimized their power through their apparent ability to satisfy consumers needs Moving beyond binaries of production and consumption the essays collected here examine the lessons consumption studies can offer about ethnic and national identity and the role of economic expertise in shaping consumer behavior From Polish VCRs to Ukrainian fashion boutiques tropical fruits in the GDR to cinemas in Belgrade The Socialist Good Life explores what consumption means in a worker state where communist ideology emphasizes collective needs over individual pleasures

Digital Domesticity Jenny Kennedy, Michael Arnold, Martin Gibbs, Bjorn Nansen, Rowan Wilken, 2020 At the turn of the twenty first century typical households were equipped with a landline telephone a desktop computer connected to a dial up modem and a shared television set Television radio and newspapers were the dominant mass media Today homes are now network hubs for all manner of digital technologies from mobile devices littering lounge rooms to Bluetooth toothbrushes in bathrooms and tomorrow these too will be replaced with objects once inconceivable Tracing the origins of these digital developments Jenny Kennedy Michael Arnold Martin Gibbs Bjorn Nansen and Rowan Wilken advance media domestication research through an ecology based approach to the abundance and materiality of media in the home The book locates digital domesticity through phases of adoption and dwelling to management and housekeeping to obsolescence and disposal The authors synthesize household interviews technology tours remote data collection via mobile applications and more to offer readers groundbreaking insight into domestic media consumption Chapters use original case studies to empirically trace the adoption use and disposal of technology by individuals and families within their homes The book unearths social and material accounts of media technologies offering insight into family negotiations regarding technology usage in such a way that puts technology in the context of recent developments of digital infrastructure devices and software all of which are now woven into the domestic fabric of the modern household Developing News Jairo Lugo-Ocando, An Nguyen, 2017-02-17 Developing News sets out to describe how development is articulated in the news and used by newspeople as an analytical category to explain the world. It is about examining development as a discourse that is based on the harmful contrast between the developed and the developing or the underdeveloped and that sets the boundaries for what is permissible to say. Jairo Lugo-Ocando and An Nguyen begin by discussing the news coverage of development that emerged as a news category for newspapers and broadcasters after World War II. They move on to examine the way development has been reported by the mainstream media, exploring the rationales and ideologies that determined and continue to define the way the media think about and represent development in the news. In doing so, the authors contribute to a better understanding of the relationship between the news agenda, news sources, and the development policies that are set in the centres of power. This book is ideal for those studying and researching and studying issues to do with journalism and the Third World. It may also be relevant for those students taking courses in global or international journalism, media and democracy, development studies, or international politics. Above all, it is an invitation for journalists to rethink their own practice in representing international development and its component

Internet and Surveillance Christian Fuchs, Kees Boersma, Anders Albrechtslund, Marisol Sandoval, 2013-06-17 The Internet has been transformed in the past years from a system primarily oriented on information provision into a medium for communication and community building. The notion of Web 2.0, social software, and social networking sites such as Facebook, Twitter, and MySpace have emerged in this context. With such platforms comes the massive provision and storage of personal data that are systematically evaluated, marketed, and used for targeting users with advertising. In a world of global economic competition, economic crisis, and fear of terrorism after 9/11, both corporations and state institutions have a growing interest in accessing this personal data. Here contributors explore this changing landscape by addressing topics such as commercial data collection by advertising, consumer sites, and interactive media; self-disclosure in the social web; surveillance of file sharers; privacy in the age of the internet; civil watch; surveillance on social networking sites; and networked interactive surveillance in transnational space. This book is a result of a research action launched by the intergovernmental network

Communicative Constructions and the Refiguration of Spaces Gabriela B. Christmann,Hubert Knoblauch,Martina Löw,2022-02-15 The Open Access version of this book available at www.taylorfrancis.com has been made available under a Creative Commons Attribution Non Commercial No Derivatives 4.0 license Through a variety of empirical studies this volume offers fresh insights into the manner in which different forms of communicative action transform urban space With attention to the methodological questions that arise from the attempt to study such changes empirically it offers new theoretical foundations for understanding the social construction and reconstruction of spaces through communicative action Seeing communicative action as the basic element in the social construction of reality and conceptualizing communication not only in terms of the use of language and texts but as involving any kind of objectification such as technologies bodies and non verbal signs it considers the roles of both direct and mediatized or digitized communication An examination of the conceptualization of the communicative re construction of spaces and the means by which this change might be empirically investigated this book demonstrates the fruitfulness of the notion of refiguration as a means by which to understand the transformation of contemporary societies As such it will appeal to sociologists social theorists and geographers with interests in social construction and urban space

Communications/Media/Geographies Paul C. Adams,Julie Cupples,Kevin Glynn,André Jansson,Shaun Moores,2016-09-19 Although there are human geographers who have previously written on matters of media and communication and those in media and communication studies who have previously written on geographical issues this is the first book length dialogue in which experienced theorists and researchers from these different fields address each other directly and engage in conversation across traditional academic boundaries The result is a compelling discussion with the authors setting out statements of their positions before responding to the arguments made by others One significant aspect of this discussion is a spirited debate about the sort of interdisciplinary area that might emerge as a focus for future work Does the already established idea of communication geography offer the best way forward If so what would applied or critical forms of communication geography be concerned to do Could communication geography benefit from the sorts of conjunctural analysis that have been developed in contemporary cultural studies Might a further way forward be to imagine an interdisciplinary field of everyday life studies which would draw critically on non representational theories of practice and movement Readers of Communications Media Geographies are invited to join the debate thinking through such questions for themselves and the themes that are explored in this book for example of space place meaning power and ethics will be of interest not only to academics in human geography and in media and communication studies but also to a wider range of scholars from across the humanities and social sciences
