Frisians and Their North Sea Neighbours John Hines, Nelleke IJssennagger, 2017 La 4e de couv indique As early as the 1st century AD learned Romans knew of more than one group of people living in north western Europe beyond their Empire's Gallic provinces whose names contained the element that gives us modern Frisian Those apparently were Celtic speaking peoples but that population seems to have completely replaced in the course of the convulsions that Europe underwent at the transition from the Ancient world to the Early Medieval in the 4th and 5th centuries The importance of linguistically Germanic Frisians as neighbours of the Anglo Saxons Franks Saxons and Danes in the centuries immediately following the fall of the Roman Empire in the West is widely recognized and yet these folk themselves remain enigmatic and the details of their culture and organization unfamiliar to many The Frisian population and their lands are the focal point of this volume although as is shown we often have to approach and to understand these people through comparison with or even through the eyes of their neighbours Empirically this perspective embraces all of the coastal communities of the North Sea region and their connexions with the Baltic shores Twelve separate but complementary papers present the most up to date discoveries research and interpretations following the story of the various Frisians through from the Roman Period to the next great period of disruption and change introduced by the Viking Scandinavians
