

The OKCupid dataset: A very large public dataset of dating site users

Abstract

A very large dataset ($N=68,371$, 2,620 variables) from the dating site OKCupid is presented and made publicly available for use by others. As an example of the analyses one can do with the dataset, a cognitive ability test is constructed from 14 suitable items. To validate the dataset and the test, the relationship of cognitive ability to religious beliefs and political interest/participation is examined. Cognitive ability is found to be negatively related to all measures of religious belief (latent correlations $-.26$ to $-.35$), and found to be positively related to all measures of political interest and participation (latent correlations $.19$ to $.32$). To further validate the dataset, we examined the relationship between Zodiac sign and every other variable. We found very scant evidence of any influence (the distribution of p-values from chi square tests was flat). Limitations of the dataset are discussed.

Keywords: open data, big data, OKCupid, dating site, cognitive ability, IQ, intelligence, scale construction, religiosity, politics, astrology, Zodiac sign

1 Introduction

Despite many years of advocacy of proponents, it is still uncommon for social scientists to publicly share their datasets and even sharing data on request is rare (Krawczyk & Reuben, 2012; Savage & Vickers, 2009; Tenopir et al., 2011; Wicherts et al., 2011). Worse, there is some evidence which indicates that those who refuse to share data upon request make more statistical errors than those who share data (Wicherts et al., 2011). This is doubly problematic because the mistakes cannot be corrected by other researchers. Furthermore, a given dataset may have many uses not all of which are known to those who collected it. Even if they are known, the collectors may not be interested in them (or even interested in hiding the results (Duarte et al., 2015)), or they may simply not have enough time. Whichever it is, if the analyses are not done by the collectors and the data are unavailable to anyone else, the data is not used to its full extent. Because science is usually funded by the public, this wastes an incredible amount of public funds.

The lack of data sharing probably slows down the progress of science immensely because other researchers would use the data if they could. Supporting this, it can be observed that known public datasets enjoy widespread use. For instance, Project TALENT is a very large ($N=440,000$) dataset of American high school students collected in 1960. The dataset is still used by researchers examining questions never conceived of when it was collected. According to Google Scholar (<https://scholar.google.com>), there were 255, 148 and 116 papers published in 2013, 2014 and 2015 that had “project talent” in their text¹, indicating that it can still be useful despite being about 56 years old. For instance, (Dunkel, 2014) used the data to examine the cognitive ability of children by the language spoken by their parents, while Major et al. (2014) examined the linearity of relationships between cognitive ability and personality traits, and Damian & Roberts (2015) examined whether birth order showed relationships to cognitive ability and personality.
