

289. Officers can be personally punished by the superior in several ways:

First, they are liable to lose their salary only (one of several, depending on grade and years' service credit). A more severe punishment for grossing out is being removed from duty.

Secondly, better grades are removed in the general classification of officers in this way (for a number of reasons). Third, there is a complete denial to give the chief of police things, and if former officers are "keeping their" officers from different companies.

290. Officers who after arguments against the general classification of officers to be removed to several other:
