Regulating Gas Liberalization Anton Ming-Zhi Gao, 2010-10-20 This is the first book to analyze in a comparative way the detailed development of the unbundling and open access regimes across three continents. It is the author's contention that these two legal forms should be more widely implemented than they are at present. In each of five substantial chapters on the United States, Europe, Japan, South Korea, and Taiwan, the author first focuses on the proposed or current laws and industrial practices on service account functional legal and ownership unbundling and independent system operator and then on those of different open access regimes mainly including regulated and negotiated third party access insofar as they have been developed in each location. Using empirical evidence from Europe, the United States, and Japan, that a well formulated and comprehensive liberalization can bring about more advantages than disadvantages, he shows how well designed unbundling and open access regimes may accomplish the following: inject much needed competition into gas exploration, exploitation, import, production, and retailing; reform and re-regulate non-competitive sectors such as transportation, distribution, and storage; balance potential conflicts between energy security and competition; and support interests such as environmental protection, energy rights, safety, and consumer protection.

Carbon Pricing in Emerging Economies İzzet Arı, 2025-05-13 Carbon pricing is one of the key policy instruments available to help countries reach the goals of the Paris Agreement and the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC). This book explores the challenges and opportunities facing emerging economies in the implementation of carbon pricing, with a particular focus on the case of Türkiye. After introducing the principles and practicalities of carbon pricing mechanisms, the book explores the economic feasibility of Türkiye achieving Nationally Determined Contributions (NDCs) and net zero emissions targets. It is argued that its national circumstances hinder Türkiye's use of carbon crediting mechanisms, auctions for carbon certificate units, and building bilateral and multilateral cooperation with other countries, leaving the voluntary carbon market as the only option. The book explores the implications of this and also highlights the need for improvements and reform in Türkiye's climate laws, public institutions, and international relations to better support carbon pricing. The book also recommends aligning carbon pricing with ongoing energy market reforms, including the replacement of fossil fuel subsidies with more targeted support. This book will be of significant interest to readers of energy economics, environmental economics, emerging economies, and climate change more broadly.
