From Intensified Work to Professional Development Jan Löwstedt, 2007 Teachers often feel that they have to mount enormous hills in their daily work Teaching can be demanding distressing and even painful but it can also be very rewarding just as the climber who reaches the top can feel intrinsically satisfied These facets and consequences of teachers work are apparent in the studies presented in this book Some studies report that teachers experience a diversity of stresses while others find that teachers in general report work satisfaction and only moderate levels of work related stress There are various reasons as to why this might be and this book s objective is to explore some of these and their effects on teachers working lives Another objective is to explore what schools as organisations do or can do to facilitate teachers professional development and well being The book gives a European perspective on issues relating to teachers professional development and well being in an age of reform pressure and deregulation common to schools in most European countries

Religion as a Profession Hans Schilderman, 2005-09-01 This volume offers a conceptual and empirical study of the religious profession It takes as its point of departure professionalisation theory that is discussed and applied to a profession in mainstream religion in this case Dutch Catholic ministry The book entails a well documented empirical study of attitudes of clergy and lay personnel in the Dutch Roman Catholic Church regarding the pastoral profession Their attitudes towards church authority apostolicity sacramental efficacy accession to the office and spiritual role are described extensively The research clarifies the extent to which these religious attitudes act as a positive or negative motif to engage in policies that are aimed at a professional development of the occupation The book offers an excellent insight into basic characteristics of a religious profession
