for Oceanic History Civil War Ironclads supplies the first comprehensive study of one of the most ambitious programs in the history of naval shipbuilding In constructing its new fleet of ironclads William H Roberts explains the U S Navy faced the enormous engineering challenges of a largely experimental technology. In addition it had to manage a ship acquisition program of unprecedented size and complexity To meet these challenges the Navy established a project office that was virtually independent of the existing administrative system The office spearheaded efforts to broaden the naval industrial base and develop a marine fleet of ironclads by granting shipbuilding contracts to inland firms Under the intense pressure of a wartime economy it learned to support its high technology vessels while incorporating the lessons of combat But neither the broadened industrial base nor the advanced management system survived the return of peace Cost overruns delays and technical blunders discredited the embryonic project office while capital starvation and never ending design changes crippled or ruined almost every major builder of ironclads When Navy contracts evaporated so did the shipyards Contrary to widespread belief Roberts concludes the ironclad program set Navy shipbuilding back a generation The Original United States Warship Monitor Cornelius Scranton Bushnell, John Ericsson, Cornelius S.
