

HOW TO GET YOUR DENTAL OFFICE OSHA COMPLIANT

☐ LEARN HOW TO MAKE YOUR OFFICE OSHA COMPLIANT

Beyond the main responsibility of a hazard-free workplace, you must examine your office conditions so they precisely comply with OSHA standards. Employers should establish appropriate procedures and communicate them to employees so they are able to follow safety and health requirements in the office. You must provide employees with safe, well-maintained equipment. Employers must also use required labels, signs, and color codes to warn staff of any workplace dangers.

☐ OSHA PAPERWORK AND DOCUMENTATION

OSHA requires documents such as printed proof of annual OSHA employee training, verification of GHS chemical training, filed records of Hep B vaccinations, and employee medical histories. Employee occupational exposures must also be categorized and rated. Be aware that different states can require additional paperwork from workplaces.

☐ RECOGNIZE HAZARDS COMPROMISING SAFETY BY EMPLOYEE TRAINING

Employees are supposed to receive OSHA training annually, as it is mandatory for United States businesses and offices. Every employee in the office must be trained. Dentists are also required to train their team in the new chemical label and Safety Data Sheet requirements. The Safety Data Sheet (SDS) contains critical information on chemical classification and their properties, presented in a user-friendly format.

☐ UNDERSTAND HOW OSHA CONDUCTS INSPECTIONS

OSHA conducts random inspections, so knowing how to get your dental office OSHA compliant is essential. You should thoroughly prepare for these inspections. Since OSHA is allowed to show up at a chosen facility completely unannounced, a visit may happen at any point during the work week.

☐ IMPLEMENT STANDARD SAFETY PROCEDURES

There is a multitude of standard OSHA safety procedures you must implement. Check the OSHA website or a dental-specific manual for a full explanation.

- HAZARD COMMUNICATION STANDARD
- BLOODBORNE PATHOGENS STANDARD
- EXIT ROUTES STANDARD
- ELECTRICAL STANDARD
- IONIZING RADIATION STANDARD

☐ LEARN HOW TO MAINTAIN OSHA MANUALS

OSHA regulations can change periodically. Employers must provide new updates to employees when these changes happen. You must be very descriptive and specific when talking to employees. All staff is still required to know the extent of the law.
