

The background features a composite image. On the left, a translucent anatomical diagram of a male torso shows the spine and ribcage. A red, glowing area highlights the lower thoracic and upper lumbar vertebrae, indicating a site of pain or bone density loss. On the right, a photograph of a man in a grey t-shirt is shown from the back, with his hands clasped over his lower back, suggesting physical discomfort. The overall design includes green circular accents in the top-left and bottom-right corners and a pattern of small white dots in the bottom-left corner.

Screening Men for Osteoporosis U. S. Department of Veterans Affairs, Health Services Research & Development Service, 2013-06-18 Although the Surgeon General's recent report on osteoporosis stated that strong bones are essential to overall health and quality of life it warned that the bone health status of Americans is in jeopardy. Traditionally osteoporosis was viewed as a disease of women but it has become clear that osteoporotic fractures result in substantial morbidity, mortality and costs in men. A 60 year old man has a 25% lifetime risk of sustaining an osteoporotic fracture. The consequences of this fracture can be severe as the one year mortality rate in men after hip fracture is twice that of women. With the aging of the population rates of osteoporosis in men are expected to increase nearly 50% in the next 15 years and hip fracture rates are projected to double or triple by 2040. Furthermore annual U.S. direct medical costs for osteoporosis exceed 17 billion and are expected to increase rapidly with an aging population. The percentage of costs directly attributable to men or veterans is unclear although 25% of hip fractures the fracture type associated with greatest costs due to hospitalization and long term care occur in men. This large and growing clinical and cost burden combined with an environment of increasingly limited health care resources strongly underlies the need to develop rational evidence based osteoporosis management strategies to obtain maximum benefit for every health care dollar spent. Despite the substantial advances in our understanding of osteoporosis over the last decade there are no consensus guidelines on the assessment and management of male osteoporosis. Although osteoporosis management strategies have been evaluated in women much less work has been done in this area in men. Lack of research in this area has led to considerable uncertainty regarding optimal osteoporosis strategies in men and Veterans. The VA Office of Quality and Performance and the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force offer no clinical practice guidelines on the management of osteoporosis in men. This review is being performed as part of the Evidence Synthesis Project an HSR 2. Are there any validated screening tools for osteoporosis in men beyond DXA assessed central bone density and 3. What is the evidence regarding bone mineral density and fracture risk. Although 25% of men over the age of 60 will sustain osteoporotic fractures during their lifetime data suggest that male osteoporosis is underdiagnosed and undertreated. In order to help inform decisions about whether the Veterans Health Administration should develop screening guidelines for male osteoporosis summaries of what is known about 1. the epidemiology of male osteoporosis and 2. the validity of tools to screen and diagnose male osteoporosis are needed. The Key Questions were Key Question 1. What are the prevalence of and risk factors for osteopenia, osteoporosis and osteoporotic fractures among men in general and among male Veterans specifically. Key Question 2. Are there any validated tools outside of central bone density to screen for osteoporosis in men. Key Question 3. What values of BMD determined by Dual energy X ray Absorptiometry (DXA) and by different DXA techniques have been used to diagnose osteopenia and osteoporosis and what is the evidence regarding the relationship between differing definitions and the development of osteoporotic fractures. Osteoporosis in Men Eric S.

Orwoll, John P. Bilezikian, Dirk Vanderschueren, 2009-11-30 Since the publication of the first edition the U S Surgeon General released the first ever report on bone health and osteoporosis in October 2004 This report focuses even more attention on the devastating impact osteoporosis has on millions of lives According to the National Osteoporosis Foundation 2 million American men have osteoporosis and another 12 million are at risk for this disease Yet despite the large number of men affected the lack of awareness by doctors and their patients puts men at a higher risk that the condition may go undiagnosed and untreated It is estimated that one fifth to one third of all hip fractures occur in men This second edition brings on board John Bilezikian and Dirk Vanderschueren as editors with Eric Orwoll The table of contents is more than doubling with 58 planned chapters The format is larger 8 5 x 11 This edition of Osteoporosis in Men brings together even more eminent investigators and clinicians to interpret developments in this growing field and describe state of the art research as well as practical approaches to diagnosis prevention and therapy Brings together more eminent investigators and clinicians to interpret developments in this growing field Describes state of the art research as well as practical approaches to diagnosis prevention and therapy There is no book on the market that covers osteoporosis in men as comprehensively as this book
