Our Army At The Front Heywood Broun, 2019-11-22 would have news of him fully and authentically no matter what happened to him. So Mr Allen posted his representatives in every hospital in every trench sector and through them kept track of every soldier. If a man was taken prisoner Mr Allen knew it. If he was wounded Mr Allen knew just where and how. The man's family was told of it immediately. Presently where this was possible Mr Allen's representative was writing letters from the wounded men to their relatives and was receiving all Mr Allen's news of these relatives for the men in the hospital. In addition to things of this kind done by Red Triangle men, Red Cross men and the Salvation Army and the Knights of Columbus all these organizations worked together to effect distributions of comfort kits and sweaters, gift cigarettes and chocolate and all the dozen and one things that made the soldiers find life a little more agreeable. There was more than co-operation from the army itself. There was the deepest gratitude openly expressed from every member of the army, whether general or private, because it was a recognized fact that though an army cannot do these things itself it owes them more than it can ever repay.

CHAPTER XVI INTO THE TRENCHES AFTER months of training behind the lines the doughboys began to long for commencement. It came late in October. The point selected for the trench test of the Americans was in a quiet sector. The position lay about twelve miles due east from Nancy and five miles north of Luneville. It extended roughly from Parroy to Saint Die. Even after the entry of the Americans the sector remained under French command. In fact the four battalions of our troops which made up the first American contingent on the fighting line were backed up by French reserves. No better training sector could have been selected for this. This was a quiet front. American officers who acted as observers along this line for several days before the doughboys went in found that America in the War - Our Army at the Front Heywood Broun, 2009-12 Many of the earliest books, particularly those dating back to the 1900s and before, are now extremely scarce and increasingly expensive. We are republishing these classic works in affordable, high quality, modern editions using the original text and artwork.

Our Army, 1947 United States Army in the World War, 1917-1919: Reports of the commander-in-chief, AEF, staff sections and services, 1988 A seventeen volume compilation of selected AEF records gathered by Army historians during the interwar years. This collection in no way represents an exhaustive record of the Army's months in France, but it is certainly worthy of serious consideration and thoughtful review by students of military history and strategy and will serve as a useful jumping off point for any earnest scholarship on the war. Foreword by William A. Stofft.
