The Comprehensive Public High School G. Sherington, Craig Campbell, 2006-02-04 This book traces the decline of the public comprehensive high school. New educational markets emphasized school diversity and parental choice rather than social equity through common schooling and they were criticized for declining standards. The book also considers government education policies and their regional manifestations. Education and the Discourse of Global Neoliberalism

John Gray, John P. O'Regan, Catherine Wallace, 2021-05-22 This book investigates neoliberalism in education and explains how it is a complex phenomenon which takes on local characteristics in diverse geopolitical, economic and cultural settings while retaining a core commitment in all its manifestations to market fundamentalism. Neoliberalism that set of beliefs and practices which has become the economic orthodoxy of global preference since the 1980s appears remarkably resilient despite the US financial crisis of 2008 and the subsequent implementation of austerity in the massively indebted nations of the European Union. This book addresses the phenomenon of neoliberalism in education and focuses on school and higher education settings in Ireland, the UK, Singapore and Hong Kong. Specifically it addresses the role of language and semiosis in the reconfiguration of global educational practices along increasingly marketised lines. At the same time the nature of the counter-hegemonic discourses also in circulation in these sectors is also considered. Collectively the chapters in the book seek to shed light on the possibilities for resistance and the prospect of change from a variety of theoretical and inter-cultural perspectives. The chapters in this book were originally published in a special issue of the journal Language and Intercultural Communication.

The Crisis of the Meritocracy Peter Mandler, 2020-09-11 Before the Second World War only about 20% of the population went to secondary school and barely 2% to university; today everyone goes to secondary school and half of all young people go to university. How did we get here from there? The Crisis of the Meritocracy answers this question not by looking to politicians and educational reforms but to the revolution in attitudes and expectations amongst the post-war British public: the rights guaranteed by the welfare state; the hope of a better life for one's children; widespread upward mobility from manual to non-manual occupations; confidence in the importance of education in a learning society and a knowledge economy. As a result of these transformations, meritocracy—the idea that a few should be selected to succeed—has been challenged by democracy and its wider understandings of equal opportunity across the life course. At a time when doubts have arisen about whether we need so many students and amidst calls for a return to grammar school selection at 11 the tension between meritocracy and democracy remains vital to understanding why our grandparents our parents ourselves and our children have sought and got more and more education and to what end

Secondary Education and the Raising of the School-Leaving Age T. Woodin, G. McCulloch, S. Cowan, 2013-10-09 The progressive raising of the school leaving age has had momentous repercussions for our understanding of childhood and youth for secondary education and for social and educational inequality This book assesses secondary education and the raising of the school leaving age in the UK and places issues and debates in an international context
