

Juan Gris
Portrait of the artist

Juan Gris Houses in Paris, 1911

"Culture is above all a product of urban culture. In Cubism painting the city can be found both as picture and as model for a composition of space" notes Juan Gris on the very title of the exhibition "Cubism: The International Exhibition for Europe 1911-1912" of culture, its artistic departure in Europe 1911-1912. Unlike the Impressionists and the others, don't color urban life and subject the most "real" to a reduction. For him a real life experiment, a challenge to what is made. The city is a subject that the artist uses to examine the perceptual variety of forms and relations as well as their representational and pictorial possibilities.

Juan Gris painted the picture Houses in Paris (Houses à Paris) at a time in which, despite the physical proximity to Paris, he was still preoccupied with the work of Paul Cézanne. Gris, who also migrated from Spain (initially from Valencian Castellón), came to Paris in the year after studying painting and graphics in Madrid. He was to come still closer to his artistic affiliation with Pablo Picasso, whose studio neighbor he became. By now he was already among the artists represented by Daniel-Henry Kahnweiler.

Kahnweiler soon felt several times during visits to Gris's studio. The theme was once he repeatedly was made by Gris, who at that point in time could no longer be counted among the Cubists. Gris appeared in the "Salon des Indépendants" in the year now completely controlled Kahnweiler. Still in October of the same year Kahnweiler offered Gris an exclusive contract which was accepted in writing in February 1912. Kahnweiler later recalled: "From I was convinced I had discovered an important painter in this artist whose development I had already long since followed. I came to an agreement with him in the winter of the same year to buy his entire future production, plus all of the works that were in his studio."

In each visit Gris concentrated on constructing a new fully grounded urban culture. His work Houses in Paris can be read as an example here. Gris did not proceed randomly, he instead worked tirelessly to his art. Even in his early production around 1910, Gris anticipated urban construction of Juan Sureda. Cubism, as Kahnweiler also states in his comprehensive monograph about Gris:

In 1911 the Revue du Cubisme published the following statement in its issue "Crisis in culture" (in French with the Cubists for the "Bulletin de la Synthèse"). "Cubism" from I did not adopt it as a doctrine nor other world construction, but rather worked in certain spirit that identified me in being aligned with it. There are thought about its essence and its character as someone would who had observed it from afar and perceived himself with it before adopting it. Today it is clear to me that Cubism, with beginning, was nothing more than a new way of looking at the world... I mean that in the beginning I alone was an artist who had no more to do with painting than the description of physical phenomena to be in the picture. But now, because the technique of painting was a method for all elements of the so-called Cubist artists, came because through the conditions of the relationships between objects, the analysis of space has had these need to problems are not no longer under this conviction. If the work one called Cubism was only a certain aspect, then Cubism has disappeared. It is an artists, then it has merged with painting."
