Examination Board of musical appreciation as a subject which may be offered for entrance to college this mode of studying music has established itself firmly in our educational system Yet its progress is still hampered by the lack of suitable text books The existing books are for the most part either too technical to be easily followed by the general reader or so rhapsodical and impressionistic as to be of no use to him In the following pages an effort has been made first to present to the reader in clear and untechnical language an account of the evolution of musical art from the primitive folk song up to the symphony of Beethoven second to illustrate all the steps of this evolution by carefully chosen musical examples in the form of short quotations in the text and of complete pieces printed in a supplement third to facilitate the study of these examples by means of detailed analysis measure by measure in many cases put into the shape of tabular views and fourth to mark out the lines of further study by suggesting collateral reading Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that the music itself is the central point of the scheme of study to which the reader must return over and over again Carefully attentive concentrated listening to the typical pieces presented in the supplement is the essence of the work to which the reading of the text is to be considered merely as an aid These pieces are for the most part not beyond the reach of a pianist of moderate ability At the same time the authors have realized that some readers who might profit much by such study will not be able to play or have played for them even these pieces For them however the music will still be accessible through mechanical instruments
