in the internal relations between the self and the mind's objects Meg Harris Williams and Margot Waddell show that these relations have their origins in the drama of identifications which we can see played out metaphorically and figuratively in literature which presents the self creative process in aesthetic terms They argue that psychoanalysis is a true child of literature rather than merely the interpreter or explainer of literature illustrating this with some examples from clinical experience but drawing above all on close scrutiny of the dynamic mental processes presented in the work of Shakespeare Milton the Romantic poets Emily Bronte and George Eliot The Chamber of Maiden Thought will encourage psychoanalytic workers to respond to the influence of literature in exploring symbolic mental processes By bringing psychoanalysis into creative conjunction with the arts it enables practitioners to tap a cultural potential whose insights into the human mind are of immense value
