Muscular Dystrophy Katherine M.D. Bushby, Louise V.B. Anderson, 2010-11-09 The term muscular dystrophy MD describes a group of primary genetic disorders of muscle that often have a distinctive and recognizable clinical phenotype accompanied by characteristic but frequently not pathognomonic pathological features Research into the molecular basis of the MDs by a combination of positional cloning and candidate gene analysis has provided the basis for a reclassification of these disorders with genetic and protein data augmenting traditional clinically based nomenclature These findings have brought insights into the molecular pathogenesis of MD with an increasing number of potential pathways involved in arriving at a dystrophic phenotype Some common themes can be recognized however including the involvement of five members of the dystrophin associated complex dystrophin and four sarcoglycans in different types of MD and the involvement of two nuclear envelope proteins in producing an Emery Dreifuss MD phenotype Other disease associated genes appear to cause MD in a completely unrelated way such as the involvement of calpain 3 in a form of limb girdle muscular dystrophy Section 1 of Muscular Dystrophy Methods and Protocols reviews traditional strategies used to identify MDs Meantime techniques developed as a result of the research strategies described previously have become an integral part of the management of many patients with MD and their families and these techniques are addressed in Sections 2 DNA based tests and 3 protein based analyses The continued effort to translate this enhanced understanding into a molecular cure or treatment for MD is reviewed in Section 4
