Music Recommendation And Discovery Music Recommendation And Discovery:

Music Recommendation and Discovery Oscar Celma, 2010-11-04 In the last 15 years we have seen a major transformation in the world of music. Musicians use inexpensive personal computers instead of expensive recording studios to record mix and engineer music. Musicians use the Internet to distribute their music for free instead of spending large amounts of money creating CDs hiring trucks and shipping them to hundreds of record stores. As the cost to create and distribute recorded music has dropped the amount of available music has grown dramatically. Twenty years ago a typical record store would have music by less than ten thousand artists while today online music stores have music catalogs by nearly a million artists. While the amount of new music has grown some of the traditional ways of finding music have diminished. Thirty years ago the local radio DJ was a music tastemaker finding new and interesting music for the local radio audience. Now radio shows are programmed by large corporations that create playlists drawn from a limited pool of tracks. Similarly record stores have been replaced by big box retailers that have ever shrinking music departments. In the past you could always ask the owner of the record store for music recommendations. You would learn what was new what was good and what was selling. Now however you can no longer expect that the teenager behind the cash register will be an expert in new music or even be someone who listens to music at all. them ritually participated in public with and through them and thwarted them Sometimes users follow algorithms Siles finds and sometimes users resist them At times users do both Agency lies in the navigation of the spaces in between By analyzing what we do with algorithms rather than what algorithms do to us Living with Algorithms clarifies the debate over the future of datafication and whether we have a say in its development Concentrating on an understudied region of the global south the book provides a new perspective on the commonalities and differences among users within a global ecology of technologies
