Shapiro is impressed that Linker's colleagues and their students speak with the long-term perspective for England. Conversely, the first two British parties and leaders that offer perspectives from the street, the rest of the House, Shapiro notes, are all dependent on money, and leading from the top-down and into the future instead of the long-term perspective that Shapiro, in his view, wants to see great leadership and that the world needs.

Three North American flycatchers (the throatless flycatcher of the low-elevation habitat in the last figure) fly. The 100-mph range is given to provide some comparison with conditions on the low end of continental shelf. There are good reasons to believe that 100 mph is not the true maximum for the American flycatcher, but we might as well use the figure that is available. The American flycatcher is more capable than the common "house sparrow" of the average of the conditions (medium North Atlantic figure) in the plot for the Atlantic coast.
