Material Feminisms: New Directions for Education Carol Taylor, Gabrielle Ivinson, 2018-02-02

Material Feminisms New Directions for Education provides a range of powerful theoretical and innovative methodological examples to illuminate how new material feminism can be put to work in education to open up new avenues of research design and practice. It poses challenging questions about the nature of knowledge production, the role of the researcher, and the critical endeavour arising from inter and post disciplinarity. Working with diffractive methodologies and new materialist ecological epistemologies, the book offers resources for hope which widen the scope for how educational problems are interrogated and provides a political counter movement to neo positivist outcomes based approaches within education. Inspired by writers such as Barad, Bennett and Deleuze and Guattari, the book makes a radical break with cognitive dualist and universal conceptions of human subjectivity and intelligence in education. By taking its starting point as the co constitutiveness of discourse, materiality, corporeality and place, the book foregrounds educational practices as material enactments of multiple, non linear, entangled affective and relational forces. It offers new insights into how gender, class and ethnicity are constituted in and by material assemblages that are often submerged or unseen. This book is an essential starting place for those intrigued by what new theoretical accounts of materiality, posthumanism and affect can offer educational research. Diffractive methodologies challenge readers to take a fuller range of actors into account than in objective humanist methodologies and in so doing to pay closer attention to what data is. It invites researchers to engage with long standing feminist concerns about power and knowledge production in research processes. This book was originally published as a special issue of Gender and Education.

Neolithic Settlement in Ireland and Western Britain Ian Armit, Queen's University of Belfast, 2003

The papers in this volume, which were presented at a conference held at Queen's University Belfast, provided a forum for a discussion of the new Neolithic material from Ireland in its wider geographical context. Although the bulk of the emerging Irish settlement evidence relates to substantial houses, many of these papers consider wider themes including issues of contact and communication along the sea routes and coastal margins of north west Europe, questions of diversity and regional patterns of sedentism and mobility, and variations in regional food production strategies. The volume includes twenty six papers representing a series of studies ranging geographically from Orkney to the French Atlantic facade.

Assessment, management and future directions for coastal fisheries in Asian countries Silvestre, G. et al, 2003-12-08

In Asia, the fisheries sector is important in terms of food security, livelihoods and foreign exchange earnings. However, as in many parts of the world, there are signs that capture fisheries are fully exploited or overfished. Management of fisheries in the region is often hampered by lack of information on the status of fisheries in terms of biological, social, economic, policy and governance aspects. This regional project documents an alarming decline in coastal fishery resources based on historic research surveys in South and Southeast Asia. Socio economic analyses and policy reviews highlight the importance of the fisheries sector but also the challenges facing it.

Potential interventions to improve fisheries management in the countries are outlined and defined with environmental socioeconomic and institutional objectives

Cultural Politics of Targeted Killing Kyle Grayson, 2016-07-15 The deployment of remotely piloted air platforms RPAs or drones has become a defining feature of contemporary counter insurgency operations Scholarly analysis and public debate has primarily focused on two issues the legality of targeted killing and whether the practice is effective at disrupting insurgency networks and the intensive media and activist scrutiny of the policy processes through which targeted killing decisions have been made While contributing to these ongoing discussions this book aims to determine how targeted killing has become possible in contemporary counter insurgency operations undertaken by liberal regimes Each chapter is oriented around a problematisation that has shaped the cultural politics of the targeted killing assemblage Grayson argues that in order to understand how specific forms of violence become prevalent it is important to determine how problematisations that enable them are shaped by a politico cultural system in which culture operates in conjunction with technological economic governmental and geostrategic elements The book also demonstrates that the actors involved what they may be attempting to achieve through the deployment of this form of violence how they attempt to achieve it and where they attempt to achieve it are also shaped by culture The book demonstrates how the current social relations prevalent in liberal societies contain the potential for targeted killing as a normal rather than extraordinary practice It will be of great use for academic specialists and graduate students in international studies geography sociology cultural studies and legal studies
