Booth was an improving and resident landlord who spent large amounts of money improving the estate and in building Lissadell House. He adopted a paternalistic approach to this people not only on his property but among the community at large especially during the Famine. Part of policy to improve the estate and consolidate holdings was to assist 1 500 of his tenants to emigrate to North America during the Famine. While most of the schemes were successful there were occasions where the tenants arrived in a poor condition for which he was severely criticized by the Canadian authorities. Sir Robert was actively involved in local politics and was the MP for the county for 26 years. America, History and Life, 1997 Provides historical coverage of the United States and Canada from prehistory to the present. Includes information abstracted from over 2 000 journals published worldwide. Irish Economic and Social History, 1996 Sending Out Ireland's Poor Gerard Moran, 2004 Between 1800 and 1914 over eight million people emigrated from Ireland. While the majority paid their own passage or had the fares paid by relations and friends in North America there was a sizeable group who could not afford to leave. This book looks at the 300 000 emigrants who went to North America from nineteenth century Ireland and who had their fares paid by the British government, landlords, poor law unions and philanthropists. Most of these emigrants were among the poorest people in Ireland: workhouse paupers, landless laborers and single women. They were often regarded as permanent deadweight who could contribute little to their future well being and be better off in North America or the colonies. Most of the assisted emigrants experienced harsh conditions in North America. While some were well cared for such as the Peter Robinson settlers to Ontario between 1823 and 1835 and the Tuke emigrants who were encouraged to settle in Canada and the mid western states of the United States in the 1880s others had more difficult encounters. Those who were assisted by landlords such as the Marquis of Lansdowne and Lord Palmerston were sent to Quebec, New York and St John and had to look after themselves from the time of disembarkation. Many of the assisted emigrants settled in Five Points in New York where they lived in squalid conditions but through perseverance and hard work bettered themselves. The majority of these emigrants were happy to leave Ireland in the hope of a better life in North America. The Searcher, 2002

Passage to the World Kevin Brown, 2013-04-30 From the early nineteenth century onwards literally millions of people left their homes to cross the seas. Some like the convicts transported to Australia had no choice; others like the indentured Indian and Chinese labourers had almost no alternative but the vast majority were driven to escape war, famine or grinding poverty in Europe by seeking a new life abroad. Whatever their circumstances and wherever their destination the one experience they all shared in common was the sea voyage. This book is centred on the rite of passage that marked the transition from one life to the other, tracing the story of the emigrant through a fresh look at original sources and first hand accounts from the decision to emigrate, the journey to the port and the voyage itself to arrival in the new world. It describes the emigrant trade, the differing conditions on board sailing ships and steamers, convict and coolie ships and the perils of overcrowding, epidemics, fire, shipwreck and even cannibalism. It also investigates the varied receptions emigrants were likely to face not necessarily the welcome promised the homeless tempest tost by the Statue of Liberty This unprecedented population shift left few European families untouched by emigration while the present day populations of the Americas and Australasia are dominated by the descendants of those who made the journey This gives the emigrants story a universal interest
