The Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) has published a study that suggests that the use of a computerized decision support system (DSS) can improve the quality of medical care. The study, conducted by researchers at the University of California, San Francisco, found that the DSS helped physicians to identify and manage patients at high risk for complications. The researchers also found that the DSS helped to reduce the number of hospital admissions and the length of hospital stays. The study was published in the Journal of the American Medical Association in the March 19, 1997 issue.

only one written by a Northerner offers a unique perspective on daily life at the fringes of America's bloodiest conflict. An articulate, educated and keen observer, Stevens took note of seemingly everything: the weather, illnesses, food shortages, parties, church attendance, chores, schools, childbirth, death, the family's slaves and political and military news. As she confided her private thoughts to her journal, she unwittingly revealed how her love for her Texas family and the Confederate soldier boys she came to care for blurred her loyalties, even as she continued to long for her home in Ohio. Showing how the ties of heritage, kinship, friendship and community transcended the sharpest division in US history, this rare diary and Vicki Adams Tongate's insightful historical commentary on it provide a trove of information on women's history, Texas history and Civil War history.
