Swedish Military Intelligence Gunilla Eriksson, 2016-08-16 Gunilla Eriksson revises our perception of intelligence as carefully collected data and objective truth arguing that there are hidden aspects to intelligence analysis that need to be uncovered and critically examined This twofold study investigates the character of intelligence knowledge and the social context in which it is produced using the Swedish Military and Security Directorate MUST as a case study Eriksson argues that there is an implicit framework that continuously influences knowledge production what kind of data is considered relevant how this data is interpreted and the specific social and linguistic context of the organisation surrounded by unarticulated norms and specific procedures She asks whether these conventions hamper or obstruct intelligence assessments an essential analysis given that history has shown us the grave consequences basing policy on intelligence's wrong conclusions for the Democratisation Process in Tanzania Jonas Ewald, 2013 Tanzania has been independent in 2011 for 50 years While most neighbouring states have gone through violent conflicts Tanzania has managed to implement extensive reforms without armed political conflicts Hence Tanzania is an interesting case for Peace and Development research This dissertation analyses the political development in Tanzania since the introduction of the multiparty system in 1992 with a focus on the challenges for the democratisation process in connection with the 2000 and 2005 elections The question of to what extent Tanzania had moved towards a consolidation of democracy is analysed by looking at nine different institutions of importance for democratisation grouped in four spheres the state the political civil and economic society Focus is on the development of the political society and the role of the opposition in particular The analysis is based on secondary and primary material collected between September 2000 to April 2010 The main conclusion is that even if the institutions of liberal democracy have gradually developed in practice single party rule has continued manifested in the 2005 election when the CCM won 92% of seats Despite impressive economic growth poverty remains deep and has not been substantially reduced On a theoretical level this brings the old debate between liberal and substantive democracy back to the fore Neither the economic nor the political reforms have brought about a transformation of the political and economic system resulting in the poor majority gaining substantially more political influence and improved economic conditions Hence it is argued that the interface between the economic political and administrative reforms has not been sufficiently considered in the liberal democratic tradition Liberal democracy is necessary for a democratic development but not sufficient for democracy to be consolidated For that a substantive democratic development is necessary Gender, Informal Institutions and Political Recruitment E. Bjarnegård, 2013-02-18 Parliaments around the world are still overwhelmingly populated by men yet studies of male dominance are much rarer than are studies of female under representation In this book men in politics are the subjects of a gendered analysis How do men manage to hold on to positions of power despite societal trends in the opposite direction And why do men seek to cooperate mainly with other men Elin Bjarnegård studies how male networks are maintained and expanded and seeks to improve our understanding of the rationale underlying male dominance in politics The findings build on results both from statistical analyses of parliamentary composition worldwide and from extensive field work in Thailand A new concept homosocial capital is coined and developed to help us understand the persistence of male political dominance

Autonomy Paradox: Teachers' Perceptions of Self-Governance Across Europe Wieland Wermke, Maija

Salokangas,2021-03-24 What do we mean when we speak about teacher autonomy How free are teachers to go about their work To answer these complex questions the authors asked thousands of teachers in four national contexts in Finland Ireland Germany and Sweden what they think autonomy looks like The resulting book examines teacher autonomy theoretically and empirically comparing teachers perceptions of their professional autonomy Utilizing a mixed method approach the authors combine data from a large scale questionnaire study teacher interviews lesson and meeting observations and workshops that brought together teachers from the four participating countries All this engagement with teachers revealed that simply increasing their professional autonomy might not lead to desired outcomes This is because from a teachers point of view increased decision making capacity brings further complexity and risk to their work and it may instead lead to anxiety self restriction and the eventual rejection of autonomy These surprising conclusions challenge the increasingly orthodox view that increased autonomy is a desirable end in itself This is what the authors call the autonomy paradox Cartelisation,

Convergence or Increasing Similarities? Henrik Enroth,Magnus Hagevi,2018-03-02 It is often suggested that political parties are becoming increasingly alike and that party politics has turned into an elite affair where political professionals collude to further their self interest rather than work to represent the interests of their constituents In recent decades this diagnosis has been famously associated with Richard Katz and Peter Mair s cartel party theory Yet so far this controversial thesis has not been subjected to systematic empirical scrutiny nor has its conceptual and normative underpinnings been properly considered In this volume a group of political scientists with different specialisations take on this task focusing empirically on the Swedish party system which the originators of the cartel party theory have suggested is especially conducive to the formation of party cartels Collecting new and unique qualitative and quantitative data the volume casts serious doubt on the validity of the cartel party theory as an explanation for party system change Strengthening

Saraiva Schott,Henrik Aspegren,Mimmi Bissmont,Jes la Cour Jansen,2013-12-17 This book focuses on sustainable solid waste management in an urban context and gives an example of how a modern city can work with waste management for increased sustainability in close cooperation with the academy The book describes challenges which the city is facing and presents a case on how these can be tackled based on several research and development projects performed in the City of Malm over the last decade In these projects the city has worked as a test bed for new solutions developed with and evaluated by the university The projects and evaluations of the same have been developed with a multi dimensional approach including technical aspects resource efficiency economic parameters information strategies towards households and user friendliness Methods used for evaluation are presented in a comprehensive way together with a discussion on how results from performed evaluations have affected the solid waste management policy making in the city The book describes a bridging over a commonly noticed gap between research on the one hand and policy making and technical management on the other Several examples are given on how academy and real life and full scale developments in the city can have a fruit full

Law and Spatial Planning Stefan Larsson,2014-08-20 This PhD thesis in Spatial Planning argues for the importance of understanding the approaches to knowledge and rationalities embedded in spatially relevant decision making It emphasises the significance of seeing law as an empirical object of study for planning and environmental management The Swedish development of wind power and 3G mobile infrastructures are used as cases to study these issues of principal interest It is a compilation thesis consisting of a comprehensive introductory framework and five articles or chapters that have also been published elsewhere The study is based on three main perspectives Level of decision making legitimacy of different forms of knowledge involved in the process and the sociolegal tension between formal law and its practical consequences The thesis deals with problems stemming from the multi level tensions in the planning and implementation that exist between the national the regional and the local authorities The legal context is analysed from the sociolegal perspective in particular how the juridification of siting and permit conflicts determines what type of knowledge that can legitimately affect the decision making and thereby set conditions for public participation Finally the thesis elaborates on the largely counterproductive results of the strong emphasis on efficiency in the revision of planning and permit processes for wind power and 3G infrastructure and what can be learnt from the experiences of the attempts at increasing efficiency A combination of methods has been employed in the studies and the data comes from a range of sources such as a large set of mast building permits a sample of wind permit cases as well as appealed permit cases In addition interviews have been conducted with judges from relevant courts including regional handling officers who assess wind turbine applications Legal documents such as preparatory work and licence conditions have also been analysed The results show that there is a legal rhetorical adaptation to the expert based decision making in court when permits are appealed Further the administrative levels interact poorly in the overall implementation The national decisions irrespective of the normative viewpoint of who should control the landscape planning could be better informed of the preconditions at a local level that factually define the outcome of the implementation
