Treatment of High-Risk Sexual Offenders

An Integrated Approach

Jeffrey Abracen and Jan Looman

The treatment and management of sexual offenders is a topic of great interest, but while much has been written about the treatment of sexual offenders generally, little has been written about the comprehensive treatment of groups of specifically high risk sexual offenders. Treatment of High-Risk Sexual Offenders addresses concrete management strategies, from initial intake to community treatment programs, and describes a detailed, complete program for high risk offenders which has been developed, tested and refined over 15 plus years, and has a strong empirical basis.

The model, which is based on the principle of integrative care, draws on the established Risk-Need-Responsivity (RNR) model for offender assessment and rehabilitation but adds new components of CBT and motivational interviewing. It gives specific consideration to the role of mental disorder and complex trauma in the development and maintenance of offending behaviour, areas which can often be neglected. Given the complex nature of this population, treatment focuses on both traditional criminogenic needs not specific to sexual offenders (e.g. substance abuse, criminal thinking styles) and sex offender specific issues (e.g. deviant arousal, intimacy deficits) in an integrated approach. A variety of outcome data related to two sex offender treatment programs managed by the authors, and described in detail, is included in the text.

Dr Jeffrey Abracen is Chief Psychologist with Central District Parole, Correctional Service of Canada. He has provided training related to the community treatment and supervision of sexual offenders to a variety of audiences and has more than thirty publications in peer-reviewed journals, as well as many conference presentations.

Dr Jan Looman is a psychologist working on the Forensic Unit of Providence Care Mental Health Services in Kingston, Canada. He has carried out training regarding the assessment and treatment of sex offenders at various conferences and workshops and has more than thirty peer-reviewed publications in this area.

The Resettlement of Sex Offenders after Custody

David Thompson, Terry Thomas, 2017-07-14 Circles of Support and Accountability is a voluntary initiative that assists people with convictions for sexual offences to resettlement in the community. People leaving prison with such convictions often have difficulties in resettling. They carry the burden of the conviction itself which may be both stigmatising and isolating and they are the subject of sex offender register requirements, parole and other supervisory conditions. Circles of Support and Accountability in the UK started over ten years ago and have slowly spread across the country. They work closely with the police and probation services but rely entirely on volunteers prepared to give up their time to work with people often otherwise shunned by communities. Circles offer support to the person concerned but also hold them accountable for their future behaviour. They aim to ensure there are no more victims. This book is based on original research and provides a close up picture of how these Circles of Support and Accountability work in practice. It brings together for the first time the voices of all the participants from the offenders and the volunteers through to the Coordinators who link the volunteers to the professionals in the form of the police and probation services. The research was commissioned by Circles UK and funded by the Wates Foundation and the University of Leeds School of Law.
