

ANSWER KEY - The Properties of Language: PRACTICE

A) Identify the property of language that is best illustrated by each of the following examples. Refer to Yule's and O'Grady's discussions. Explain each case.

Note: you will find that you can relate an example to more than one property. This is because whenever language is used, there is arbitrariness, double articulation, discreteness and so on. In your answers, refer to the property that is more closely related to the example. The first one has been done for you.

1. Queen Elizabeth will make an extremely rare address to the nation on Sunday as Britain grapples with the increasingly deadly coronavirus outbreak.

The property that is best represented in this example is displacement. This property allows the users of a language to talk about things and events not present in the immediate environment (i.e., the context of situation: the place and time of speaking). Here we read that the queen of England is going to deliver a speech on Sunday, that is to say, we can talk about an event which hasn't happened yet, as well as about the queen, the British nation, the coronavirus outbreak, even though we cannot see them here and now (in our immediate environment).

English: horse
Spanish: caballo
German: Pferd
Icelandic: hestur
Scottish: cuddy

Arbitrariness. The fact that different languages have different, unrelated linguistic forms for the same concept (here 'horse') reveals the arbitrary (or conventional, as opposed to 'iconic'/'natural') relation between words and what they refer to.

3. Old Spanish: Las mugieres son llegadas a Castiella.

Modern Spanish: Las mujeres han llegado a Castilla.

Changeability. Languages change over time, and in this example, we can see some changes that have taken place in the Spanish language, such as the spelling of some words (mugieres; Castiella) or the use of auxiliary verbs.

4. 'Almost as fast as the virus spread, so did instances of covidiotic behaviour.'

Productivity. Languages adjust to new situations and new inventions. Our present day pandemic situation has led to the 'creation' of new terms, such as 'covidiotic'. (creativity: speakers say things they have never heard before) by combining the linguistic resources in the language (sounds, morphemes, pre-existing words).

5. English: man, pan, ban, fan

Discreteness. In this example, we can see that by changing one sound (the initial one in these English words), meaning changes. Phonemes are capable of distinguishing meaning.
