

A medical illustration of a human spine, viewed from the side. The vertebrae are shown in a light blue/white color against a dark blue background. A minimally invasive surgical approach is depicted, showing a small incision in the lower back. A surgical instrument, possibly a tubular retractor system, is shown entering the spine through this incision. The instrument consists of a long, thin tube that follows the curve of the spine, with a smaller, more complex structure attached to it. The overall image has a professional, clinical feel.
