

NIBCO CHEMICAL RESISTANCE GUIDE FOR VALVES & FITTINGS

INTRODUCTION

This chemical resistance guide has been compiled to assist the piping system designer in selecting chemical resistant materials. The information given is intended as a guide only. Many conditions can affect the material choice. Careful consideration must be given to temperature, pressure and other job considerations before a final material selection is selected.

Temperature and chemistry physical characteristics are more detailed in temperatures than metals. For this reason, a temperature has been designated for each.

MATERIALS: THERMOPLASTICS & ELASTOMERS

- Temp. at 10" — (A) rating, maximum temperature which is recommended constant under normal conditions.
- (B) or Temp. at 10" — Conditional resistance; consult factory.
- (C) — Not recommended.
- (None) — No data available.

MATERIALS: THERMOPLASTICS FOR METALS

- (A) — Recommended; constant under normal conditions.
- (B) — Conditional; consult factory.
- (C) — Not recommended.
- (None) — No data available.

Temperature maximum for thermoplastics elastomers and their use are listed above but within suitable temperature ranges for individual cases. THERMOPLASTICS ARE NOT RECOMMENDED FOR COMPRESSION AND OR BULK SERVICE.

This guide considers the resistance of a metal when assembly is used for the resistance of individual parts and being assembled. The rating assigned to the metal body plus the consideration is of rating that of the metal assembly parts. In the cases where the rating falls to the "not recommended" level, the conditions arise with the use of constant in steel strength and the use of the body being enough to be suitable for a period of time. Such use should always be accompanied by careful consideration of the component in a piping system.

In the selection of a butterfly valve for use with a corrosive stream, the flow and the corrosive stream. Different materials should vary in rating of (A). The body of a properly functioning butterfly valve is isolated from the chemicals being treated and need not carry the same rating.

THERMOPLASTICS & ELASTOMERS

ABS — Acrylonitrile Butadiene Styrene (Class 4-12) conforming to ASTM D-709 is a thermoplastic material. This material is used in flow and waste systems for liquid formation under ABS does meet and can meet chemical resistance and mechanical even very high rates. The maximum (100°F) temperature resistance is provided at the temperature shown. ABS (100°F) has proven satisfactory for use for flow. ABS (100°F) These temperatures satisfy the need that to service temperatures or the design of the fluid into the system. ABS (100°F) is very resistant to acids such as hydrochloric, nitric, formic, acetic, and phosphoric. However, caution is required. ABS (100°F) is rated by solvent resistance in flowing conditions. For chemical resistance, consult the NIBCO Engineering Dept. for use of chemical ratings.

CPVC — Chlorinated Polyvinyl Chloride (Class 12-15), formerly designated Type 1, Grade 1, conforming to ASTM D-1784, has excellent properties at 175°F under normal conditions. It has excellent resistance to acids in its general form. This is that of PVC (CPVC), with a design stress of 2000 psi and constant service temperatures of 175°F that permit its use in chemical resistant for hot chemical service, hot or cold water distribution, and various applications where the temperature range of PVC (CPVC) is given by solvent resistance, flowing or hanging.

PP (Polypropylene) — Type 1 Polypropylene is a thermoplastic which is lightweight and generally high in chemical resistance. Although Type 1 polypropylene conforming to ASTM D-1784 is slightly lower in physical properties compared to PVC it is almost only resistant to organic solvents as well as acids and alkalis. Generally polypropylene construction is used in contact with strong oxidizing acids, concentrated hydrocarbons, and alcohols. With a design stress of 1000 psi at 175°F polypropylene has good water resistance where it maintains its full strength. Polypropylene is particularly suited to salt water chemical lines, waste oil piping, and low pressure gas gathering systems. Polypropylene has not proved to be an excellent material for pressure and reduced strength where exposed to acids, bases, and alcohols are in contact. Polypropylene is suitable for hot and cold water service, flowing or hanging. At 100°F it is rated for use. PP should be used for storage only in a pressure full condition (10 psi).

PVC — Polyvinyl Chloride (Class 12-15) is formerly designated Type 1, Grade 1. PVC is the most frequently specified of all the thermoplastic materials. It has been used successfully for over 50 years in both solid and chemical processing. Industrial piping, waste water distribution, chemical waste lines, chemical storage, and injection systems. PVC is characterized by high physical properties and resistance to corrosion and chemical attack by acids, alkalis, salt solutions, and many other chemicals. It is an excellent material for water service distribution, cold water cold hydrocarbons and alcohols. The maximum service temperature of PVC is 100°F. With a design stress of 2000 psi, PVC has the highest long term hydrostatic strength at 100°F of any of the major thermoplastics being used for piping systems. PVC is given for solvent resistance, flowing or hanging.

PEER (Polyethylene Glycol) — Ethylene glycol primarily is a strong, tough and abrasion resistant thermoplastic material. It is more resistant and more resistant to strength under it. It is extremely resistant to most acids, bases, and organic solvents and is strong, resistant to flowing water in its chemical, chemical and other systems. The flow and thermoplastic piping components can operate the operation of strength, thermal resistance and working temperatures of PEER. PEER is given for the thermal and solvent resistance, flowing or hanging.

EPDM — EPDM is a synthetic elastomer made from ethylene propylene diene monomer. EPDM has good abrasion and low resistance and offers excellent chemical resistance to a variety of acids and alkalis. It is recommended to select the type and to be recommended for applications involving pressure and strong
