Parents with Substance Use Disorders and Child Protection Issues Thomas P. Brouwer, 2011 Each day the safety and well being of children across the Nation are threatened by child abuse and neglect Many of these children live in homes where substance use disorders create additional and compounding problems The child welfare and alcohol and drug abuse treatment fields are working to find effective ways to serve families where this overlap occurs Intervening effectively in the lives of these children and their families is not the responsibility of a single agency or professional group but rather it is a shared community concern This book provides a basis for understanding parental substance abuse and its relationship to child maltreatment Parental Substance Use : , 2021 Children Exposed to Parental Substance Misuse Rena Phillips, 2004 Increased awareness of the effects on children of drugs alcohol and other substances used by parents especially mothers during pregnancy has raised some searching questions Accessibly written for the non medical reader this book considers the impact psychological social behavioural and genetic on children exposed to parental substance abuse and tackles the challenges posed in parenting children damaged in this way Parental Substance Abuse and Its Effects on the Fetus and Children California. Legislature. Senate. Select Committee on Substance Abuse, 1988 Bruised Before Birth Joan McNamara, Amy Bullock, Elizabeth Grimes, 1995-01 Parenting Children Exposed to Parental Substance Abuse Addresses the concerns of those who seek to increase their awareness of the effect on children of drugs alcohol and other substances used by parents especially by mothers during pregnancy Parental Substance Abuse and Child Neglect Jennifer B. Hughes, 2014 Child neglect is the most common form of child maltreatment and yet less recognized treated or researched than child physical or sexual abuse Child neglect is also highly associated with parental substance abuse parents trauma histories and trauma symptoms This study explores the relation between parental substance abuse parental history of trauma and trauma related symptoms and child neglect within a sample of families involved in a family treatment drug court FTDC for parental substance abuse and child neglect Data were collected on 70 mothers and fathers who became involved with the FTDC because they neglected their children as a result of their substance abuse Parental substance abuse was assessed at intake using a semi structured clinical interview Parents trauma history trauma symptoms and parenting attitudes were collected using self report measures A trained clinician assessed family functioning and parenting techniques The severity of parents alcohol problems and trauma histories were found to impact their use of adaptive parenting techniques Parents trauma symptoms and trauma histories were found to differentially impact the parent child relationship children of parents with more severe trauma symptoms were at a greater risk of neglect while children of parents who experienced four or more adverse childhood experiences were at a lower risk of neglect Parents trauma histories and experience of childhood neglect also impacted treatment gains Recommendations for assessing parents trauma histories and symptoms as they relate to substance abuse and child welfare treatment planning are discussed Methods to improve the study of child neglect are also
