Parole, Desistance from Crime, and Community Integration National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Law and Justice, Committee on Community Supervision and Desistance from Crime, 2007-12-26 Every day about 1 600 people are released from prisons in the United States Of these 600 000 new releasees every year about 480 000 are subject to parole or some other kind of postrelease supervision Prison releasees represent a challenge both to themselves and to the communities to which they return Will the releasees see parole as an opportunity to be reintegrated into society with jobs and homes and supportive families and friends Or will they commit new crimes or violate the terms of their parole contracts If so will they be returned to prison or placed under more stringent community supervision Will the communities to which they return see them as people to be reintegrated or people to be avoided And the institution of parole itself is challenged with three different functions to facilitate reintegration for parolees who are ready for rehabilitation to deter crime and to apprehend those parolees who commit new crimes and return them to prison In recent decades policy makers researchers and program administrators have focused almost exclusively on recidivism which is essentially the failure of releasees to refrain from crime or stay out of prison In contrast for this study the National Institute of Justice NIJ of the U S Department of Justice asked the National Research Council to focus on desistance which broadly covers continued absence of criminal activity and requires reintegration into society Specifically the committee was asked 1 to consider the current state of parole practices new and emerging models of community supervision and what is necessary for successful reentry and 2 to provide a research agenda on the effects of community supervision on desistance from criminal activity adherence to conditions of parole and successful reentry into the community To carry out its charge the committee organized and held a workshop focused on traditional and new models of community supervision the empirical underpinnings of such models and the infrastructure necessary to support successful reentry Parole Desistance from Crime and Community Integration also reviews the literature on desistance from crime community supervision and the evaluation research on selected types of intervention

different functions to facilitate reintegration for parolees who are ready for rehabilitation to deter crime and to apprehend those parolees who commit new crimes and return them to prison In recent decades policy makers researchers and program administrators have focused almost exclusively on recidivism which is essentially the failure of releasees to refrain from crime or stay out of prison In contrast for this study the National Institute of Justice NIJ of the U S Department of Justice asked the National Research Council to focus on desistance which broadly covers continued absence of criminal activity and requires reintegration into society Specifically the committee was asked 1 to consider the current state of parole practices new and emerging models of community supervision and what is necessary for successful reentry and 2 to provide a research agenda on the effects of community supervision on desistance from criminal activity adherence to conditions of parole and successful reentry into the community To carry out its charge the committee organized and held a workshop focused on traditional and new models of community supervision the empirical underpinnings of such models and the infrastructure necessary to support successful reentry Parole Desistance from Crime and Community Integration also reviews the literature on desistance from crime community supervision and the evaluation research on selected types of intervention

The Oxford Handbook of Developmental and Life-Course Criminology David P. Farrington, Lila Kazemian, Alex R. Piquero, 2018-11-23 Developmental and life course criminology are both concerned with the study of changes in offending and problem behaviors over time Developmental studies in criminology focus on psychological factors that influence the onset and persistence of criminal behavior while life course studies analyze how changes in social arrangements like marriage education or social networks can lead to changes in offending Though each perspective is clearly concerned with patterns of offending and problem behavior over time the literature on each is spread across various disciplines including criminology criminal justice psychology and sociology The Oxford Handbook on Developmental and Life Course Criminology offers the first comprehensive survey of these two approaches together Edited by three noted authorities in the field the volume provides in depth critical reviews of the development of offending developmental and life course theories development correlates and risk protective factors life transitions and turning points and effective developmental interventions from the world's leading scholars In the first two sections the contributors provide overviews of specific criminal career parameters including age crime curve prevalence frequency of offending and co offending and review the main theoretical frameworks in the developmental and life course criminology areas They further summarize some of the empirical literature on known developmental correlates and risk protective factors associated with longitudinal patterns of offending in the next section The fourth section focuses on life transitions and turning points as they may relate to persistence in or desistance from criminal activity into adulthood while the final section examines the genesis of antisocial delinquent and criminal activity its maintenance and its cessation A state of the art overview on the topic this Handbook aims to be the most authoritative resource on all issues germane to developmental and life course criminologists and provides next

Congress. House. Committee on Oversight and Government Reform. Subcommittee on Federal Workforce, Postal Service, and the District of Columbia,2009 Retributivism Has a Past Michael Tonry,2011-09-01 For nearly two centuries in the United States the punishment of crime was largely aimed in theory and in practice at prevention rehabilitation or incapacitation and deterrence In the mid 1970s a sharp and some argued permanent shift occurred Punishment in the criminal justice system became first and foremost about retribution Retribution trumped rehabilitation proportionality outweighed prevention The retributivist sea change was short lived however After a few decades some policy makers returned tentatively to individualized approaches to punishment launching initiatives like drug courts and programs for treatment and reentry Others promoted policies that retained the rhetoric but betrayed the theory punishment in proportion to culpability of retributivism resulting in mandatory minimum sentences three strikes and you re out laws dangerous offender and sexual predator laws truth in sentencing and life without the possibility of parole What now for retributivism Retributivism Has a Past Has It a Future brings thoughtfulness and rigor back into the retributivism debate This collection of essays trains some of the most influential and brightest established and up and coming legal and philosophical minds on how retributivism does might or should affect contemporary policy and practices The volume s aim is neither to condemn nor to justify but to take new policies and practices seriously and examine them closely At a time when criminal justice policy makers are forced to reconsider contemporary approaches to punishment and attempt to devise new ones Retributivism Has a Past Has It a Future offers serious theoretical critiques of the recent past and justifications for possible futures The Oxford Handbook of Sentencing and Corrections Joan Petersilia, Kevin R. Reitz,2012-04-06 This handbook surveys American sentencing and corrections from global and historical views from theoretical and policy perspectives and with attention to a number of problem specific issues      The American Prison Francis T. Cullen, Mary K. Stohr, 2014 For the first time in four decades prison populations are declining and politicians have reached the consensus that mass imprisonment is no longer sustainable At this unique moment in the history of corrections the opportunity has emerged to discuss in meaningful ways how best to shape efforts to control crime and to intervene effectively with offenders The American Prison Imagining a Different Future by Francis T Cullen Cheryl Lero Johnson and Mary K Stohr pulls together established correctional scholars to imagine what this prison future might entail Each scholar uses his or her expertise to craft in an accessible way for students to read a blueprint for how to create a new penology along a particular theme For example one contributor writes about how to use existing research expertise to create a prison that is therapeutic and another provides insight on how to create a feminist prison In the final chapter the editors pull together the lessons learned in a cohesive comprehensive essay      Preventing Crime Tore Bjørge, 2016-01-26 Traditional schools of crime prevention like the criminal justice model social crime prevention or situational crime prevention have proved to be too narrow and do not combine well with other approaches However each of these models provides important insights and contributions for reducing crime By extracting the main preventive mechanisms of these diverse approaches this book develops a more holistic general model that consists of nine preventive mechanisms building normative barriers to crime reducing recruitment deterrence disruption incapacitation protecting vulnerable targets reducing benefits of crime reducing harm and facilitating desistance The measures to activate the preventive mechanisms may differ according to the type of crime as may the actors in charge of implementing the relevant measures However Tore Bjørge demonstrates how his model of crime prevention can be effectively applied to diverse forms of crime from domestic burglaries to criminal youth gangs and driving under the influence to organized crime and terrorism In doing so this important book will be of interest to scholars and students of policing security studies and criminology as well as practitioners and policy makers
