Republican Lens Joan Judge, 2015-07-21 What can we learn about modern Chinese history by reading a marginalized set of materials from a widely neglected period In Republican Lens Joan Judge retrieves and revalorizes the vital brand of commercial culture that arose in the period surrounding China's 1911 Revolution Dismissed by high minded ideologues of the late 1910s and largely overlooked in subsequent scholarship this commercial culture has only recently begun to be rehabilitated in mainland China Judge uses one of its most striking innovative and continually mischaracterized products the journal Fun shibao The women's eastern times as a lens onto the early years of China's first Republic Redeeming both the value of the medium and the significance of the era she demonstrates the extent to which the commercial press channeled and helped constitute key epistemic and gender trends in China's revolutionary twentieth century The book develops a cross genre and inter media method for reading the periodical press and gaining access to the complexities of the past Drawing on the full materiality of the medium Judge reads cover art photographs advertisements and poetry editorials essays and readers columns in conjunction with and against one another as well as in their broader print historical and global contexts This yields insights into fundamental tensions that governed both the journal and the early Republic It also highlights processes central to the arc of twentieth century knowledge culture and social change the valorization and scientization of the notion of experience the public actualization of Republican Ladies and the amalgamation of Chinese medicine and scientific biomedicine It further revives the journal s editors authors medical experts artists and most notably its little known female contributors Republican Lens captures the ingenuity of a journal that captures the chaotic potentialities within China s early Republic and its global twentieth century

Hypnosis in the Realm of De-Sign Maurício S. Neubern, 2025-01-23 This book presents a new theoretical framework for the study of hypnosis based on an innovative epistemological approach called De sign This approach transcends the opposition subjectivity objectivity and presents itself as a metaknowledge that integrates design and semiotics and proposes a phenomenological method of inquiry that helps overcome some of the traditional challenges to create theoretical models to explain hypnosis Both hypnosis and De sign are critical practices against absolute notions of reality especially regarding time space and otherness Both of them consider the importance of epistemological notions such as imagination feelings and desire that modern science commonly marginalizes Hypnosis and De sign implicate people in partnership being critical to a dominant notion of control Thus the book presents in depth discussions on major themes of hypnosis bringing clinical practice closer to the reflections brought by De sign Hypnosis in the Realm of De Sign shows how to integrate semiotic systems pragmatism and De sign principles to analyze actual hypnotherapeutic experiences As with every De sign situation each patient requires a unique therapeutic strategy and approach that is individually appropriate for them The author thereby encourages therapists to become de signers working with not for their subjects to create a context within which their subjects can awaken their therapeutic potential By doing so patients can then bring into focus that which could be rather than focusing on that which is
