Police finances Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Home Affairs Committee,2011-02-23 This report focuses on the impact of the Government's proposed settlement for police forces from 2011/12 to 2014/15. It is expected that there will be significantly fewer police officers, police community support officers and police staff as a result of the savings being required of police forces over the next four years. The loss of posts will have an impact on the range of services that the police provide and the way in which they are provided. Police forces are being asked to prioritise the front line but there is confusion as what exactly this term means. The Home Office should work with the police service to produce an agreed definition of front line, middle office and back office police roles as soon as possible. The Government should continue taking urgent steps to reduce unnecessary bureaucracy. More co-ordinated procurement also offers scope for savings. The Home Office should clarify who will be responsible for driving better procurement when the National Policing Improvement Agency is phased out in spring 2012. The greatest savings are being required of police forces in 2012/13 when the transition from Police Authorities to Police and Crime Commissioners is scheduled to take place and when police forces nationwide will be under the additional pressure of policing the Olympics. The Home Office should acknowledge that there are risks involved in this transition and should set out how it should be managed. Police forces need a funding system that offers long term predictability in order to be able to plan more effectively especially at a time of reduced income.

Honour Based Crimes and the Law Mukaddes

Gorar,2021-05-10 Honour based violence and abuse manifests itself in different forms and this book offers a comprehensive understanding of this phenomenon This book argues that the limits of honour crimes must be defined more widely so that they include conducts and behaviours that originate from the patriarchal notion of honour such as honour based oppression and breast ironing The book provides a critical analysis and synthesis of the law in England and Wales and in the international human rights sphere The relevant domestic legislation and cases are examined to reflect on whether adequate protection is provided for the victims and potential victims of honour based violence and abuse Since honour based violence is a violation of human rights the relevant international human rights law is examined to illustrate the perception of such crimes in the international arena The effectiveness of any remedy for victims of honour based violence and abuse depends on its capability to change deep rooted behaviours in communities with honour based patriarchal values This book argues that the law does not provide the effective impact required in part due to patriarchal structures and that more efforts should be dedicated to changes in education It is held that there is a need for an educational programme that is especially designed to tackle violence and promote gender equality The book will be essential reading for academics researchers and policy makers working in the areas of Human Rights Law Criminal Law and Gender Studies
