

Abstract Background: The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of self-reported mental health problems in a community sample of young adults. Methods: A cross-sectional survey of 1,000 young adults (18–24 years) was conducted. The survey included questions about mental health problems, substance use, and demographic factors. Results: The prevalence of self-reported mental health problems was 15.2%. The most common mental health problems were anxiety disorders (8.5%), depression (7.8%), and substance use disorders (4.9%). The prevalence of mental health problems was higher among females than males (17.1% vs. 13.3%) and higher among those with a history of mental health problems (28.5% vs. 11.5%). Conclusions: The prevalence of self-reported mental health problems in this community sample of young adults is 15.2%. The most common mental health problems are anxiety disorders, depression, and substance use disorders. The prevalence of mental health problems is higher among females than males and higher among those with a history of mental health problems.
