Joined-up History Arthur

Chapman,Arie Wilschut,2015-08-01 Debates about the identity of school history and about the nature and purpose of the learning that does can and should take place in history classrooms continue in many countries around the world At issue in many of these debates beyond the concerns about history and national identity are often unaddressed questions about the role and inter relationship of historical knowledge and historical understanding in historical learning Research on historical thinking is on going and a complex tradition of enquiry has developed across national borders in the last 30 years focusing in particular on developing students understanding of historical meta concepts such as evidence and causation There has been comparatively little focus however on the historical content that students study on how they study it and on how mastery of historical content contributes to students overall picture of a historical past This volume gathers together recent research and theorising from around the world on key issues central to historical learning and instruction What sense do students make of the history that they are taught Are students able to organise historical knowledge in order to form large scale representations of the past and what difficulties can children face in doing so What are the relationships that obtain between history as an academic discipline as practised in universities and history as a subject taught in schools What can research tell us about the effects of instructional strategies that aim to help students join up what they learn in class into meaningful historical knowledge and understanding
