Mit Dem Esel Baum Lebens:

Themes of Polemical Theology Across Early Modern Literary Genres Lucy R Nicholas, Andrea Riedl, Svorad Zavarský, 2016-04-26 This innovative volume spans the early modern period and ranges across literary genres confessional divides and European borders It brings together twenty three scholars from thirteen different countries to explore the dynamic and profound ways in which polemical theology its discourses and codes interacted with non theological literary genres in this era Offering depth as well as breadth the contributions chart a myriad of intersections between Catholic Orthodox Lutheran and Reformed polemics and a range of literary types composed in Latin and the vernacular across Europe Individual essays discuss how genres such as history and poetry often represented a vehicle to promote and validate a particular confessional standpoint Authors also address the complex relationship between humanism and polemical theology which tends to be radically oversimplified in early modern studies A number of essays demonstrate the extent to which certain literary productions harnessed religious polemics in order to induce conversion or promote toleration and might even engage with supranational issues such as the divide between Eastern and Western churches As such this visionary book constructively bridges the world of religious controversy and the literary space First Lessons in German Sigmon Martin Stern, 1898 Der Lutheraner, 1881 Der Ackermann Aus Böhmen : Monatsschrift Für Das Geistige Leben Der Sudetendeutschen, 1938 , Vitae Patrum, oder Leben der Vätter.
