Language Policy in the People's Republic of China Minglang Zhou, Hongkai Sun, 2004-08-27 Language matters in China It is about power identity opportunities and above all passion and nationalism During the past five decades China's language engineering projects transformed its linguistic landscape affecting over one billion people's lives including both the majority and minority populations The Han majority have been juggling between their home vernaculars and the official speech Putonghua a speech of no native speakers and reading their way through a labyrinth of the traditional simplified and Pinyin Roman scripts Moreover the various minority groups have been struggling between their native languages and Chinese maintaining the former for their heritages and identities and learning the latter for quality education and socioeconomic advancement The contributors of this volume provide the first comprehensive scrutiny of this sweeping linguistic revolution from three unique perspectives First outside scholars critically question the parities between constitutional rights and actual practices and between policies and outcomes Second inside policy practitioners review their own project involvements and inside politics pondering over missteps undergoing soul searching and theorizing their personal experiences Third scholars of minority origin give inside views of policy implementations and challenges in their home communities The volume sheds light on the complexity of language policy making and implementing as well as on the politics and ideology of language in contemporary China

Language, Minorities and Human Rights Fernand de Varennes, 2021-09-27 One of the most vexing issues in many of the world's so called ethnic or minority conflicts is the question of language use by the State and its citizens While international and national law has traditionally viewed language preference to be within a State's prerogative at least when involving governmental activities and machinery this position has proved to be a continuous source of acrimony and conflict and wrong in some respects Language Minorities and Human Rights is the most complete book ever written on the topic providing for the first time an analysis of every aspect of language and the law In addition to presenting a theoretical model for language's particular position and relevance in human rights it constitutes an invaluable reference document by including the provisions of close to 100 international multilateral and bilateral instruments involving language rights as well as the constitutional provisions of 140 countries dealing with language By addressing little explored areas such as the language rights of indigenous peoples non citizens and even the use of script in addition to more traditional topics such as nationalism and language freedom of expression and non discrimination Language Minorities and Human Rights proposes a complete descriptive picture of language and human rights as well as proposing a number of suggestions on how to address and balance the many problems currently caused by the linguistic demands of various individuals and the interests of states in nation building

Language Policy and Linguistic Minorities in India Thomas Benedikter, 2009 India not only is concerned with inevitable multilingualism but also with the rights of many millions of speakers of minority languages As the political and cultural context privileges some major languages linguistic minorities often feel discriminated against by the current language policy of the Union and the States They experience on a daily basis that their mother tongues are deemed worthless dialects that have little utility in modern life Many such languages have definitively disappeared and several more are on the brink of extinction Is this the inevitable price to be paid for economic modernization cultural homogenisation and the multilingual fabric of India s society at large This book is an effort to map India s linguistic minorities and to assess the language policy towards these communities The author a senior researcher of the EURAC South Tyrol Italy assuming linguistic rights as a component of fundamental human rights codified in a number of international covenants and in the Indian Constitution provides an appraisal of the extent to which language rights are respected in India s multilingual reality which takes into consideration the experiences of minority language protection in other regions
