Assessment in the DSM-5 Steven K. Huprich, Christopher J. Hopwood, 2014-10-29 The DSM 5 promises to be a major reformulation of psychopathology and no section is likely to change diagnostic practice more than that of personality pathology Unlike the DSM IV the DSM 5 personality disorders will be conceptualized as involving core deficits in interpersonal and self functioning and will utilize a hybrid assessment model involving both pathological trait dimensions and a limited set of personality disorder types These changes are based on empirical and theoretical work conducted during the era of DSM III IV but nevertheless there is significant disagreement among personality assessors regarding the DSM 5 proposal In this volume several members of the DSM 5 work group offer rationales for the proposal and offer empirical evidence regarding suggested changes and several personality assessment researchers critique the proposal and offer alternative conceptualizations This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Personality Assessment

Childhood Psychopathology Cynthia L. Frame, Johnny L. Matson, 2013-11-21 One of the most important practical problems in child psychology and psychiatry is the differential diagnosis of emotional disorders Until recently the general mode of assessment had been to apply to children the characteristics of psychopathology that were evident in adults In addition there had been few assessment tools available for use with children aside from modified versions of adult instruments Understandably this approach was controversial and dissatisfaction with it led to the more recent knowledge that adult and child problems may be manifested quite differently The third edition of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders takes these factors into account much more extensively than previous editions Furthermore a great deal of research on methodology in child assessment procedures has emerged recently Yet in spite of these advances practicing clinicians are still frequently at a loss in moving from the characteristics of the disturbed child before them to the final assignment of a psychiatric diagnosis The focus of this book is to outline the various methods of viewing and categorizing the wide range childhood psycho pathology with special emphasis on the end product of making a differential diagnosis Our goal was to make this book unique in several ways First we attempted to cover a wider range of disorders than is typical in currently available hand books
