An Analysis of Elaine Tyler May's Homeward Bound Jarrod Homer, 2017-07-05 Elaine Tyler May's 1988 Homeward Bound American Families in the Cold War Era is a ground breaking piece of historical and cultural analysis that uses its findings to build a strong argument for its author's view of the course of modern US history. The aim of May's study is to trace the links between Cold War politics and the domestic lives of everyday American families at the time Historians have long noted the unique domestic trends of 1950s America with its increased focus on the nuclear family neatly divided traditional gender roles and aspirational suburban consumer lifestyles May's contribution was to analyse the interplay between the domestic scene and the political ideologies of American government and then to build a carefully constructed argument that draws attention to the ways in which these seemingly disparate forces are in fact related May s key achievement was to use her analytical skills to understand the relationships between these different factors She traced ways in which domestic life and US foreign policy mirrored one another showing that the structures and processes they aimed for while different in scale were essentially the same She then carefully brought together different types of historical data organizing her study to produce a carefully reasoned argument that the American suburban home was in certain direct ways the product of the containment policies that ruled American foreign policy at the time Internet Culture David Porter, 2013-09-13 The internet has recently grown from a fringe cultural phenomenon to a significant site of cultural production and transformation Internet Culture maps this new domain of language politics and identity locating it within the histories of communication and the public sphere Internet Culture offers a critical interrogation of the sustaining myths of the virtual world and of the implications of the current mass migration onto the electronic frontier Among the topics discussed in Internet Culture are the virtual spaces and places created by the citizens of the Net and their claims to the hotly contested notion of virtual community the virtual bodies that occupy such spaces and the desires that animate these bodies The contributors also examine the communication medium behind theworlds of the Net analyzing the rhetorical conventions governing online discussion literary antecedents and potential pedagogical applications Feminist Connections Katherine Fredlund, Kerri Hauman, Jessica Ouellette, 2020-09-29 Highlights feminist rhetorical practices that disrupt and surpass boundaries of time and space In 1917 Alice Paul and other suffragists famously picketed in front of the White House while holding banners with short pithy sayings such as Mr President How long must women wait for Liberty Their juxtaposition of this short phrase with the image of the White House a symbol of liberty and justice relies on the same rhetorical tactics as memes a genre contemporary feminists use frequently to make arguments about reproductive rights Black Lives Matter sex positivity and more Many such connections between feminists of different spaces places and eras have yet to be considered let alone understood Feminist Connections Rhetoric and Activism across Time Space and Place reconsiders feminist rhetorical strategies as linked intergenerational and surprisingly consistent despite the emergence of new forms of media and intersectional considerations Contributors to this volume highlight continuities in feminist rhetorical practices that are often invisible to scholars obscured by time new media and wildly different cultural political and social contexts Thus this collection takes a nonchronological approach to the study of feminist rhetoric grouping chapters by rhetorical practice rather than time content or choice of media By connecting historical contemporary and future trajectories this collection develops three feminist rhetorical frameworks revisionary rhetorics circulatory rhetorics and response rhetorics A theorization of these frameworks explains how feminist rhetorical practices past and present rely on similar but diverse methods to create change and fight oppression Identifying these strategies not only helps us rethink feminist rhetoric from an academic perspective but also allows us to enact feminist activist rhetorics beyond the academy during a time in which feminist scholarship cannot afford to remain behind its hallowed yet insular walls Hip to the Trip Peter B. David Blanke, David Steigerwald, 2013-02-21 In the twentieth century Americans thought of the United States as a land of opportunity and equality To what extent and for whom this was true was of course a matter of debate however especially during the Cold War many Americans clung to the patriotic conviction that America was the land of the free At the same time another national ideal emerged that was far less contentious that arguably came to subsume the ideals of freedom opportunity and equality and that eventually embodied an unspoken consensus about what constitutes the good society in a postmodern setting This was the ideal of choice broadly understood as the proposition that the good society provides
