A Handbook of Geoarchaeological Approaches for Investigating Landscapes and Settlement Sites French, Charles A. I. French, 2015 A Handbook of Geoarchaeological Approaches to Settlement Sites and Landscapes Charles French, 2015-11-30 Geoarchaeology is a major branch of archaeological science at the interfaces between geology geography and archaeology involving the combined study of archaeological soil and geomorphological records and the recognition of how natural climatic and human induced processes alter landscapes The formation and modification of past soils and occupation sequences can be examined primarily through the use of soil micromorphological techniques and various physical and geo chemical techniques This short text aims to explain some of the basics of geoarchaeological approaches and research design used to tackle the investigation of landscapes and settlement archaeology and the application of soil micromorphology to archaeological situations The intention is to present a basic handbook of good practice with case studies and examples that any archaeologist or aspiring geoarchaeologist can use Archaeology of the Ouse Valley, Sussex, to AD 1500 Dudley Moore, Michael J. Allen, David Rudling, 2016-07-10 This is the first review of the archaeology of this important landscape from Palaeolithic to medieval times by contributors all rooted in the archaeology of Sussex African Landscapes Michael Bolig, Olaf Bubenzer, 2009-06-12 Landscape studies provide a crucial perspective into the interaction between humans and their environment shedding insight on social cultural and economic topics The research explores both the way that natural processes have affected the development of culture and society as well as the ways that natural landscapes themselves are the product of historical and cultural processes Most previous studies of the landscape selectively focused on either the natural sciences or the social sciences but the research presented in African Landscapes bridges that gap This work is unique in its interdisciplinary scope Over the past twelve years the contributors to this volume have participated in the collaborative research center ACACIA Arid Climate Adaptation and Cultural Innovation in Africa which deals with the relationship between cultural processes and ecological dynamics in Africa's arid areas The case studies presented here come from mainly Sahara Sahel and southwestern Africa and are all linked to broader discussions on the concept of landscape and themes of cultural anthropological geographical botanical sociological and archaeological interest The contributions in this work are enhanced by full color photographs that put the discussion in context visually Waterscapes Archaeology Alexandra Bivolaru, Daniela Cottica, Christophe Morhange, 2025-06-19 This volume explores human environment interactions in coastal lagoons through case studies from the Mediterranean Black Sea and Persian Gulf Using methods like GPR and archaeobotany it examines settlement resource use and landscape change revealing ancient strategies for managing dynamic waterscapes Living with the Flood Samantha Paul, Kevin Colls, Henry Chapman, 2015-11-30 The site at Mill Lane Sawston represents millennia of human activity within a dynamic and changing landscape setting River valleys have been a focus for human activity since the early Holocene and in addition to providing abundant archaeological evidence for this activity the proximity to water also highlights the potential for the preservation of both archaeological remains and palaeoenvironmental source material However human activity within river valleys also commonly bridges areas of both wetland and dryland ecological zones which are often approached using quite different archaeological methods and which present considerable differences in levels of archaeological visibility and preservation The site at Mill Lane offered an uncommon opportunity to explore the interface between these two types of environment Here we present the results of the study of a wetland dryland interface on the edge of palaeochannels of the River Cam in Cambridgeshire Through the integrated archaeological and palaeoenvironmental analysis of a site on the western edge of Sawston a detailed picture of life on the edge of the floodplain from the late glacial to the post medieval periods has been developed At the heart of this is the relationship between people and their changing environment which reveals a shifting pattern of ritual occupation and more transitory activity as the riparian landscape in a wooded setting became a wetland within a more openly grazed environment The presence of potential built structures dating to the early Neolithic the early Bronze Age and the early Anglo Saxon periods provides some sense of continuity although the nature of these structures and the environmental context within which they were constructed was very different The site at Mill Lane Sawston represents millennia of human activity within a dynamic and changing landscape setting River valleys have been a focus for human activity since the early Holocene and in addition to providing abundant archaeological evidence for this activity the proximity to water also highlights the potential for the preservation of both archaeological remains and palaeoenvironmental source material However human activity within river valleys also commonly bridges areas of both wetland and dryland ecological zones which are often approached using quite different archaeological methods and which present considerable differences in levels of archaeological visibility and preservation The site at Mill Lane offered an uncommon opportunity to explore the interface between these two types of environment Here we present the results of the study of a wetland dryland interface on the edge of palaeochannels of the River Cam in Cambridgeshire Through the integrated archaeological and palaeoenvironmental analysis of a site on the western edge of Sawston a detailed picture of life on the edge of the floodplain from the late glacial to the post medieval periods has been developed At the heart of this is the relationship between people and their changing environment which reveals a shifting pattern of ritual occupation and more transitory activity as the riparian landscape in a wooded setting became a wetland within a more openly grazed environment The presence of potential built structures dating to the early Neolithic the early Bronze Age and the early Anglo Saxon periods provides some sense of continuity although the nature of these structures and the environmental context within which they were constructed was very different The site at Mill Lane Sawston represents millennia of human activity within a dynamic and changing landscape setting River valleys have been a focus for human activity since the early Holocene and in addition to providing abundant archaeological evidence for this activity the proximity to water also highlights the potential for the preservation of both archaeological remains and Practical and Theoretical Geoarchaeology Paul Goldberg, Richard I. Macphail, 2013-05-03 Practical and Theoretical Geoarchaeology provides an invaluable overview of geoarchaeology and how it can be used effectively in the study of archaeological sites and contexts Taking a pragmatic and functional approach this book presents a fundamental broad based perspective of the essentials of modern geoarchaeology in order to demonstrate the breadth of the approaches and the depth of the problems that it can tackle the rapid advances made in the area in recent years but also gives the reader a firm grasp of conventional approaches covers traditional topics with the emphasis on landscapes as well as anthropogenic site formation processes and their investigation provides guidelines for the presentation of field and laboratory methods and the reporting of geoarchaeological results essential reading for archaeology undergraduate and graduate students practicing archaeologists and geoscientists who need to understand and apply geoarchaeological methodologies Artwork from the book is available to instructors online at www.blackwellpublishing.com/goldberg This is one of the best textbooks that I have read in years I enjoyed reviewing it and found it well written and thorough in its coverage of the traditional earth science aspects of geoarchaeology The non traditional aspects were intriguing and equally thorough I predict that this book will become the textbook of choice for geoarchaeology classes for several years

Geomorphology 101 2008 740 743 Practical and Theoretical Geoarchaeology Paul Goldberg, Richard I. Macphail, Chris Carey, Yijie Zhuang, 2022-09-13 Practical and Theoretical Geoarchaeology Second Edition provides an invaluable and vastly updated overview of geoarchaeology and how it can be used effectively in the study of archaeological sites and contexts Taking a pragmatic and functional approach this book presents a fundamental broad based perspective of the essentials of modern geoarchaeology in order to demonstrate the breadth of the approaches and the depth of the problems that it can tackle the rapid advances made in the area in recent years but also gives the reader a firm grasp of conventional approaches covers traditional topics with the emphasis on landscapes as well as anthropogenic deposits and site formation processes and their investigation provides guidelines for the presentation of field and laboratory methods and the reporting of geoarchaeological results essential reading for archaeology undergraduate and graduate students practicing archaeologists and geoscientists who need to understand and apply geoarchaeological methodologies and help foster the dialog among diverse researchers investigating archaeological sites Practical and Theoretical Geoarchaeology Second Edition is an ideal resource for undergraduate and graduate students in archaeology and a great practical reference for practicing archaeologists and geoscientists who need to understand and apply geoarchaeological methodologies internationally Geoarchaeology in Action Charles French,2005-06-27

Geoarchaeology in Action provides much needed hands on methodologies to assist anyone conducting or studying geoarchaeological investigations on sites and in landscapes irrespective of date place and environment The book sets out the essential features of geoarchaeological practice and geomorphological processes and is deliberately aimed at the archaeologist as practitioner in the field It explains the basics what can be expected what approaches may be taken and what outcomes might be forthcoming and asks what we can reasonably expect a micromorphological approach to archaeological contexts data and problems to tell us The twelve case studies are taken from Britain Europe and the Near East They illustrate how past landscape change can be discovered and deciphered whether you are primarily a digger environmentalist or soil micromorphologist Based on the author s extensive experience of investigating buried and eroded landscapes the book develops new ways of looking at conventional models of landscape change With an extensive glossary bibliography and more than 100 illustrations it will be an essential text and reference tool for students academics and professionals Landscapes of Settlement Brian K. Roberts,1996 Heinrich Schenker A Research and Information Guide is an annotated bibliography concerning both the nature of primary sources related to the composer and the scope and significance of the secondary sources which deal with him his compositions and his influence as a composer and theorist Dealing with biases Hendrik Feiken,2014-09-18 This books explores the bias that is introduced by erosion and sedimentation on the distribution of archaeological materials in Mediterranean landscapes It describes innovative and interdisciplinary work that led to the formulation of a broad range of geo archeological approaches that are applied to two Italian areas studied intensively by the Groningen Institute of Archaeology the Pontine Region in South Lazio and the Raganello Basin in North Calabria The approaches deal with geological biases affecting the study of protohistoric remains in the sedimentary part of the Pontine plain the development of a detailed landscape classification approach to predict and test site location preferences and survey biases in the uplands of both study areas and the development and evaluation of an innovative computerised landscape evolution model for a test area in the Raganello Basin uplands In addition to the presented case study this book also shows how the three geo archaeological approaches can be applied in a wider context to quantitatively understand how erosion and sedimentation bias our understanding of archaeological records Digital Geoarchaeology Christoph Siart, Markus Forbriger, Olaf Bubbenzer, 2017-12-03 This book focusses on new technologies and multi method research designs in the field of modern archaeology which increasingly crosses academic boundaries to investigate past human environmental relationships and to reconstruct palaeolandscapes It aims at establishing the concept of Digital Geoarchaeology as a novel approach of interdisciplinary collaboration situated at the scientific interface between classical studies geosciences and computer sciences Among others the book includes topics such as geographic information systems spatiotemporal analysis remote sensing applications laser scanning digital elevation models geophysical prospecting data fusion and 3D visualisation categorized in four major sections Each section is introduced by a general thematic overview and followed by case studies which vividly illustrate the broad spectrum of potential applications and new research designs Mutual fields of work and common technologies are identified and discussed from different scholarly perspectives By stimulating knowledge transfer and fostering interdisciplinary collaboration Digital Geoarchaeology helps generate valuable synergies and contributes to a better understanding of ancient landscapes along with their forming processes Chapters 1 2 6 8 and 14 are published open access under a CC BY 4 0 license at link springer com Geoarchaeology Carlos Cordova, 2018-08-30 Geoarchaeology is traditionally concerned with reconstructing the environmental aspects of past societies using the methods of the earth sciences The field has been steadily enriched by scholars from a diversity of disciplines and much has happened as the importance of global perspectives on environmental change has emerged Carlos Cordova provides a fully up to date account of geoarchaeology that reflects the important changes that have occurred in the past four decades Innovative features include the development of the human ecological approach and the impact of technology on this approach how the diversity of disciplines contributes to archaeological questions frontiers of archaeology in the deep past particularly the Anthropocene the geoarchaeology of the contemporary past the emerging field of ethno geoarchaeology the role of geoarchaeology in global environmental crises and climate change Space, Time, and Archaeological Landscapes Jaqueline Rossignol, LuAnn Wandsnider, 1992-08-31 The last 20 years have witnessed a proliferation of new approaches in archaeological data recovery analysis and theory building that incorporate both new forms of information and new methods for investigating them The growing importance of survey has meant an expansion of the spatial realm of traditional archaeological data recovery and analysis from its traditional focus on specific locations on the landscape archaeological sites to the incorporation of data both on site and off site from across extensive regions Evolving survey methods have led to experiments with nonsite and distributional data recovery as well as the critical evaluation of the definition and role of archaeological sites in data recovery and analysis In both survey and excavation the geomorphological analysis of land scapes has become increasingly important in the analysis of archaeological materials Ethnoarchaeology the use of ethnography to sharpen archaeological understanding of cultural and natural formation processes has concentrated study on the formation processes underlying the content and structure of archaeological deposits These actualistic studies consider patterns of deposition at the site level and the material results of human organization at the regional scale Ethnoarchaeological approaches have also affected research in theoretical ways by expanding investigation into the nature and organization of systems of land use per se thus providing direction for further study of the material results of those systems

Geoarchaeology Michael R. Waters, 2022-02-22 Geoarchaeological studies can significantly enhance interpretations of human prehistory by allowing archaeologists to decipher from sediments and soils the effects of earth processes on the evidence of human activity While a number of previous books have provided broad geographic and temporal treatments of geoarchaeology this new volume presents a single author's view intended for North American archaeologists Waters deals with those aspects of geoarchaeology stratigraphy site formation processes and landscape reconstruction most fundamental to archaeology and he focuses on the late Quaternary of North America permitting in depth discussions of the concepts directly applicable to that research Assuming no prior geologic knowledge on the part of the reader Waters provides a background in fundamental geological processes and the basic tools of geoarchaeology He then proceeds to relate specific physical processes microenvironments deposits and landforms associated with riverine desert lake glacial cave coastal and other environments to archaeological site formation location and context This practical volume illustrates the contributions of geoarchaeological investigations and demonstrates the need to make such studies an integral part of archaeological research The text is enhanced by more than a hundred line drawings and photographs

the Archaeological Record Appendix B Geoarchaeological Studies Illustrating Site Specific Synchronic and Diachronic Alluvial Landscape Reconstructions Appendix C Geoarchaeological Studies Illustrating Regional Synchronic and Diachronic Alluvial Landscape Reconstructions The Effect of Formation Processes on Palaeolithic Settlement Patterns Aristeidis Varis, 2022 Understanding the factors that control the distribution of Palaeolithic sites comprises a fundamental objective of archaeological science Geoarchaeological approaches focusing on site formation processes have been widely applied to demonstrate the factors that influence the formation and preservation of Palaeolithic sites over time However available knowledge is heavily skewed towards extensively researched parts of the world and focuses primarily on the site specific analyses of landmark Palaeolithic sites In this context no previous study used a systematic geoarchaeological approach to investigate the impact of formation processes on a regional level in Central Asia despite the critical role of Central Asia in hominin evolution and dispersals Furthermore as the formation history of low density archaeological sites remains unaddressed the role of low density sites in hominin hunter gatherer settlement patterns remains elusive even for regions with a rich Palaeolithic record On this basis this PhD thesis performed a multi scalar approach to the analysis of the interplay between formation processes and settlement patterns by investigating site distribution on a regional scale in Kazakhstan Central Asia and a local scale in the Swabian Jura Germany Europe Paper I In search of a Palaeolithic Silk Road in Kazakhstan provides a geoarchaeological framework for contextualizing a field survey in the Inner Asian Mountain Corridor IAMC of Kazakhstan The field survey explores the distribution of Palaeolithic sites in a crucial region for Late Pleistocene hominin evolution testing the fundamental assumptions that govern predictive models of hominin dispersals and behavior in Central Asia The results revealed that three geomorphic settings karst loess and spring deposits are the most promising for the formation and preservation of archaeological sites A detailed discussion explores the systematic biases that influence data collection and interpretation according to the type of geomorphic context in which the sites are recovered In the framework of this systematic geoarchaeological analysis a primary aim was to investigate the formation processes that influence the formation and preservation of Pleistocene deposits in the most promising geomorphic settings in Kazakhstan the caves and rockshelters of the Qaratau mountains Paper II Paper II The effect of formation processes on the frequency of Palaeolithic cave sites in Semi Arid Zones Insights from Kazakhstan combines site specific data extracted from the micromorphological analysis of selected caves and landscape data extracted from survey observations to not only interpret but also assess the completeness of the known regional archaeological record In this way it sets a novel basis for investigating the formation and preservation of cave deposits in Kazakhstan with broader implications for the distribution of Palaeolithic cave sites in Central Asia The results demonstrated that cave formation processes are tied to regional geomorphic and climatic factors with implications for caves in similar semi arid settings Pleistocene deposits are scarce while aeolian loess like cave sediments and reworking processes of varying intensity dominate the depositional sequences

Furthermore hillslope erosion and loess cover impact the long term preservation of caves in the landscape Given the regional scarcity of Pleistocene archaeology in the caves of Kazakhstan emphasis was given in exploring the formation processes of low density cave sites and their role in settlement patterns in a more local scale Paper III Paper III Low density occupation sites from the Swabian Jura Implications for site formation processes and settlement patterns applies a site specific approach based on micromorphological analysis to explore the formation history of selected low density and anthropogenically sterile cave sites located in the Swabian Jura Germany one of Europe s richest regions in terms of Late Pleistocene Palaeolithic assemblages The results showed that low density cave sites are dominated by phosphatic features associated with carnivores demonstrating the use of cave spaces by both predators and hominins Most importantly the absence of dense archaeological horizons is not attributed to intense geogenic processes but rather to hominin intentionality In this regard the low density cave sites reflect sporadic hominin use most probably associated with specific mobility strategies Overall this PhD thesis identified a clear association between formation processes and the distribution of archaeological sites based on both site specific and landscape specific analyses The regional scale geoarchaeological analysis in Kazakhstan demonstrated that in built biases characterize the archaeological record in different geomorphic contexts while geogenic processes triggered by the semi arid environment may explain the removal of caves from the landscape leading to a low density distribution of archaeological cave sites At the same time the local scale geoarchaeological analysis in the Swabian Jura demonstrated that hominin intentionality and not geogenic processes control the formation of a sporadic low density archaeological cave record By understanding the processes that shape the distribution of archaeological sites or the formation of low density sequences over a given area we are able to assess the completeness of the archaeological record and construct more accurate interpretations regarding hominin dispersals and settlement patterns
