Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The participants were randomly assigned to either a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of aerobic and strength training exercises. The control group did not participate in any training. The primary outcome was the change in HRQL, measured using the SF-36 questionnaire. The secondary outcome was the change in physical fitness, measured using a 6-minute walk test. The results showed that the training program significantly improved HRQL and physical fitness in the participants. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can be an effective intervention for improving the physical fitness and HRQL of sedentary, middle-aged women.
