

Abstract

The independent party was first founded at a conference in Hartford, Conn., after George Washington Edwards was elected speaker, giving support from the press, and other leading conservative leaders. Edwards is the author of the "Principles of Conservatism" and throughout his presidential campaign he pointed out signs of "Socialist Nationalism" and during the last week of the campaign he called upon Americans to "stand with the flag" in their belief. Indeed Edwards has the honor of being elected a member of parliament at Hartford, Conn. Today representatives of the Independent party are present around the world's consulates and the party were successful in securing a large vote in Maryland, Delaware, and New Jersey. Today the Independent party shows signs of the growth of conservatism, showing throughout the campaign how the party will be ready to represent the conservative in American politics and the government.
