21 Principles of Productivity Manuel Mason, 2018-10 What is productivity Productivity is about how well a combiner uses resources such as raw materials labour skills land property managerial capability and financial tools to produce higher value goods and services Why does it matter? Getting the highest productivity factors right produces higher value products and processes than lower productivity ones more options to improve wellbeing Wages are paid for quality health and safety infrastructure for people who do it and improved environment High productivity is characterised by investment versus current investment in markets trade networks connectedness high frequency Page 4 extremely rapid uptake and smart innovation of new products and processes highly skilled workers These results fulfil the traditional ideas and capital importance of productivity The term productivity defines the benefit of an organization or man to convert available resources into useful goods Productivity in the workplace will use all our skills technology and investment to achieve maximum output with the least input that is already in place In other words productivity is about building better things faster

Motivation through ProMES Anne-Kristin Rademacher, 2012-10-02 Research Paper undergraduate from the year 2012 in the subject Leadership and Human Resources Miscellaneous grade 1.3 University of Applied Sciences course Human Resource Management language English abstract It is in the nature of humans to increase own welfare Profit orientation of shareholders and demands of employees are reflected by the same target prosperity Successful companies yield profit for shareholders but also secured working places good salary and wage developments even shareholding is possible cf Kleinbeck et al 2001 p 24 In order to be successful productivity continuously has to be improved Increasing productivity means to accomplish more with less This movement is driven by the concept of scarce resources as well as the growing competition on the markets enabled by globalization The productivity of a company strongly depends on the input of employees Until the 60s it was assumed that employees are firstly motivated by economic incentives and only later through security of employment and fair working conditions With the human relation movement abandoning wage incentives it appeared that there should be more factors that influence the productivity of employees It was assumed that employee satisfaction and intrinsic motivation lead to success cf Spender 1961 p 426 The core question is how are employee satisfaction and motivation developed and how can they be used to drive productivity The productivity measurement and enhancement system from Pritchard shall give a response to this question Pritchard states the idea is to give people the tools to do the work better while at the same time help them feel a sense of ownership in the resulting system and empowerment in determining important aspects of their work of Pritchard 2011 Lean manufacturing concepts such as world class manufacturing are built upon this idea The paper on hand raises the question if employees are being motivated by the productivity measurement and enhancement system In order to answer this question the concept of motivation will be closer defined In a second step a solid knowledge foundation on the productivity measurement and enhancement system is needed Literature on the Pritchards system concentrates on the outcome productivity rather than motivation itself Therefore a theoretical analysis is made upon the system by means of application of motivational theories Under the assumption that productivity is a result of motivation the question will also be answered through gained experience from implementation in business In conclusion motivation increasing and decreasing aspects will give weight on answering the question
