

Device with an array of magnets

The invention relates to a device for generating an alternating magnetic field, which interacts with a stationary magnetic field.

The interaction of a stationary magnetic field and an alternating magnetic field is used for some time, for example in the field of brushless DC motors, and magnetic levitation.

The invention has for its object to provide an improved apparatus for generating an alternating magnetic field, which interacts with a stationary magnetic field.

This object is achieved by a device having a rotor and a stator, which are arranged coaxially to a rotatably mounted shaft, the rotor, one or more first magnetic effects, and the stator comprises one or more second magnetic episodes, wherein the one or more first magnetic episodes each two or more arranged on a surface of a coaxial to the shaft oriented first circular cylinder dipole comprise whose dipole with a tangent to the circumference of the outer surface by a point at which the dipole pierce respectively the outer surface, enclosing a respective angle of inclination of in a range 14 degrees to 90 degrees, and the one or more second magnet sequences two or more arranged on a surface of a coaxial to the shaft oriented second circular cylinder dipole whose dipole with a tangent to the circumference of the outer surface by a point at which the dipole respectively the outer surface pierced, enclose respectively an angle of inclination, which is in a range of 14 degrees to 90 degrees, wherein the one or more first magnetic effects and the one or more second magnetic consequences in relation to a vertically arranged to a shaft axis of the shaft level each one slope angles, which lies in a range from 10 degrees to 80 degrees or 280 degrees to 350 degrees, and wherein the one or more first magnetic effects and the one or include more second magnet sequences one angle of attack, of the up in a range of 0 degrees 90 degrees.

The above-mentioned formulations "whose dipole with a tangent to the circumference of the outer surface by a point at which the dipole pierce respective lateral surface, each including an angle of inclination, which is in a range of 14 degrees to 90 degrees" are to be understood as that each of the dipole of the rotor and the stator may have a unique angle.

The only restriction on the respective individual inclination angle is that it is in a range of 14 degrees to 90 degrees.

This includes the case where two or more dipole having the same angle of inclination.

It is, for Example also possible that all the dipole of the rotor and / or the stator have the same angle of inclination.

The above-mentioned expression "the one or more first magnetic effects and which have one or more second magnetic consequences in relation to a vertically arranged to a shaft axis of the shaft level each have a pitch angle in a range from 10 degrees to 80 degrees or 280 degrees to 350 degrees" is to be understood that each sequence of the magnet rotor and the stator may have an individual pitch angle.

The only limitation of the respective individual lead angle is that it is in a range from 10 degrees to 80 degrees or 280 degrees to 350 degrees.

This includes the case where two or more magnet sequences have the same pitch angle.

It is, for Example also possible that all the magnetic effects of the rotor and / or the stator having the same pitch angle.

In the case where two magnetic effects on the rotor and / or the stator have different pitch angles, and the consequences of these magnetic associated angles are different.

Moreover, the above object is achieved by a device comprising a coaxially arranged to a rotatable shaft inside the stator, a coaxially arranged to the shaft rotor and arranged coaxially to the shaft outer stator, the rotor with respect to the inner stator, at least partially disposed radially outwardly on and fixedly connected to the shaft and the outer stator is in relation to the rotor, at least partially disposed radially further outwards, the inner stator having two or more arranged on a lateral surface
