The Social Issue in Contemporary Society Agata Stachowicz-Stanusch, Lorenzo Mercurio, 2019-03-01 It is widely observed that societies are changing and new social issues are arising The relationship between actors in the global environment and in the local as well is changing because of financial crisis new technological revolution climate change richness reallocation and concentration We can see that value creation and management models in organizations are often uncoherent with the satisfaction of needs The ability to create competitive advantages on a financial level seems to be increasingly developed This can be sustained by the clear trend that leads companies to grow in size or create strong groups by shifting uncertainty over the weaker part of the market and unorganized systems and citizens In this misalignment empty spaces in the economic environment are opened These spaces are those where the action of the public system can no longer be effective or where it has never been and where more and more the private interests are weak or absent New wants are emerging in these areas and traditional models are no longer able to answer many of these needs The book The Social Issue in Contemporary Society relations between Companies Public Administrations and People originates from a huge number of questions with the social issue as fil rouge In this perspective the book is divided in four parts Introduction New Models and Tools for Public Administration New Models for New Companies and New Models for New Societies A range of scholars that authored that book provide us with a different point of view about the problem that is underlined in the book title We hope it will be a worthy inspiration for who dream a new idea of society

Intorno al testo, 1894 Return and Circular Migration in Contemporary European History Sarah Oberbichler, Eva Pfanzelter, Valerio Larcher, 2024-10-21 Migration is often viewed as a one way process from the country of origin to the place of arrival but recent academic research shows that this presumption is fundamentally flawed Migration has always been characterized by return movements as a glance into history reveals from transatlantic returns in the 19th century to the back and forth of migrant workers and refugees in the 20th century and numerous other forced and voluntary migrations This volume invites to reconceptualize studies in migration history by shifting away from the focus on going away to a more complex one revolving around a plurality of issues of leaving returning moving on and traveling again belonging and fluid identities in third spaces Structured in three parts the contributions in this volume shed light on the close connection between power dynamics and return migration as well as how migration processes shape individual planning abilities social relationships and complex spatial dynamics The methodological part of the volume further encourages readers to reflect on growing data collections and possibilities for digital research on return migration Geometric Sturmian Theory of Nonlinear Parabolic Equations and Applications Victor A.
