Sage,2015-08-05 Perhaps the most remarkable and certainly the most thorough of all the investigations made under the auspices of this Society has been the case of the American lady Mrs Piper which begun in 1887 has continued ever since with only such intervals as were necessitated by the circumstances of the case She was already known to the Professor of Psychology at Harvard and to some other American savants but she was brought to the notice of the leaders of the English Society by Dr Richard Hodgson who has been for some years and is still acting as its representative in America and Secretary of its American Branch A complete record of the whole investigation has not yet been published but large portions of it have appeared from time to time in the Proceedings of the Society It is not to be supposed that the case is unique by any means on the contrary it may in some senses be regarded as typical but its features are exceptionally well marked and the record has been more carefully and continuously kept than that of any other case Accordingly some emphasis has been given to it and a general vague notion concerning the case has diffused itself among
