issues related to advances in computer and information technology over the past several decades. Given the substantial investments that federal state and local criminal justice agencies are making in information technology, they now consider it an integral component of understanding how our criminal justice system works. Information Technology and the Criminal Justice System suggests that information technology in criminal justice will continue to challenge us to think about how we turn information into knowledge, who can use that knowledge and for what purposes. In this text editor, April Pattavina synthesizes the growing body of research in information technology and criminal justice. Contributors examine what has been learned from past experiences, what the current state of IT is in various components of the criminal justice system, and what challenges lie ahead. Key Features: Covers a broad array of topics including IT development and applications in organizations, data quality issues, legal issues, and criminal justice education. Spans a variety of criminal justice agencies including courts, police, and corrections. Includes contributors renowned in the field of criminal justice information systems. Incorporates case studies to enhance students' understanding of real life situations. Information Technology and the Criminal Justice System is recommended for upper level undergraduate and graduate level courses in Criminal Justice departments including Information Technology and Criminal Justice, Criminal Justice Data Analysis, Crime Analysis, Technology and Criminal Justice, and Technology and Society.
