offers the capability for citizens living in an age of abundance to define themselves as something other than paid employees. Work time reform represents a first step in a process of enlightenment in which workers will create an identity through the whole of their relationships at work, home, community and at play. There is certainly a role for government in fostering the pursuit of loftier ideals subsequent to a redistribution of work time, but the first precondition for enhanced human development is greater socioeconomic participation which means more paid work for some and less for others. In addition to students and researchers in economics, sociology and political science, this book will be of interest to policy makers, policy analysts, labour unionists, environmentalists and other social reformers.
