An MIS helps decision making by providing timely, relevant and accurate information to managers. The physical components of an MIS include hardware, software, database, personnel and procedures.

Management information is an important input for efficient performance of various managerial functions at different organization levels. The information system facilitates decision making. Management functions include planning, controlling and decision making. Decision making is the core of management and aims at selecting the best alternative to achieve an objective. The decisions may be strategic, tactical or technical. Strategic decisions are characterized by uncertainty. They are future oriented and relate directly to planning activity. Tactical decisions cover both planning and controlling. Technical decisions pertain to implementation of specific tasks through appropriate technology. Sales region analysis, cost analysis, annual budgeting, and relocation analysis are examples of decision-support systems and management information systems.

There are 3 areas in the organization. They are strategic, managerial and operational control.

Strategic decisions are characterized by uncertainty. The decisions to be made in the area of strategic planning are future oriented and relate directly to planning activity. Here basically planning for future that is budgets, target markets, policies, objectives etc. is done. The Renaissance of Legacy Systems Ian Warren, 2012-12-06 Today software professionals recognize that change in software systems is inevitable There are many systems currently in operation however which were developed before the need for change was understood Such systems are commonly referred to as legacy systems and were developed with relatively short lifetimes in mind Software engineering is a relatively young discipline which is continually improving to provide better support for the development of software systems What were once state of the art techniques tools and processes are now dated and have resulted in systems which are not responsive to change For historical reasons dated development practice traded maintainability for other system attributes such as cost and performance A significant number of legacy systems remain in operation because they are critical to the business processes which they support The combination of extended lifetimes and poor maintainability means that legacy systems are expensive to change and in many cases they cannot accommodate emerging requirements This is clearly an undesirable situation which until recently has been tackled by replacing the system or attempting to maintain it Replacing a legacy system is dangerous since you face the risk of losing vital business knowledge which is embedded in many old systems In many cases system replacement is not cost effective Conversely if you attempt to maintain a legacy system there is often little return on the investment in maintenance effort and the system remains difficult and expensive to change
