Approach to Infection in the Compromised Host R. Rubin, 2013-11-11 Infection in the Compromised Host has become a classic chapter in textbooks devoted to infectious diseases and internal medicine. The numbers of compromised hosts are increasing in the era of modern medicine because of our expanded capabilities to deal with difficult diseases, especially neoplasms. As a consequence, microbiologic complications related to the intensive care administered to these patients are increasing as well. Under these circumstances, not only does the underlying illness create conditions favorable for the development of unusual infections, but often the therapy contributes to the acquisition of potential pathogens that turn into agents responsible for severe and frequently fatal disease. Granulocytopenia and immunosuppression have been the two key factors in predisposing patients with cancer and other serious diseases to severe bacterial infections. Colonization by hospital-acquired pathogens and breaks in the anatomic barriers as a result of disease or medical intervention have contributed to the high incidence of infectious diseases in these patients. Although there is some overlap between the types of infection in granulocytopenic and immunosuppressed hosts, each of these clinical entities has distinctive features that justify considering them separately, reserving the term immunocompromised hosts only when referring to patients who are predisposed to opportunistic infections. For about two decades, infections in granulocytopenic patients have attracted the attention of clinicians because they represent a model for the study of antimicrobial drugs in hosts deprived of an essential element of defense against bacterial infection: that is, an adequate number of normally functioning granulocytes. Colberg-Poley, 2018-10-08 Printed Edition of the Special Issue Published in Viruses , Hepatitis B and D Protocols Robert K. Hamatake, Johnson Y. N. Lau, 2008-02-02 Despite the availability of an effective vaccine there are still 400 million people worldwide who are chronically infected with hepatitis B virus HBV For them the vaccine as currently applied has no value Given the possible consequences of HBV infection the number of those chronically infected with HBV presents an enormous public health challenge For example the major etiology of hepatocellular carcinoma HCC is chronic infection with HBV Although fifth in cancer incidence worldwide HCC liver cancer is the third leading cause of cancer death The high mortality associated with HCC arises because the disease is often detected late and is unresponsive to treatment The number of deaths caused by PHCC is expected to rise over the next 20 years Those chronically infected with HBV have a life risk of death to HCC of between 10 and 25% Even the limited efficacy of drugs for the treatment of chronic HBV helps underscore the point that this disease is responsive to therapy Drugs that target the polymerase e.g. hepsara and lamivudine and interferon alpha represent two distinct strategies and show that both conventional antiviral and immunotherapeutic approaches can be used in management However the current inventory of therapeutics is inadequate Interferon alpha is of limited value only parenterally available and fraught with adverse reactions Cumulated Index Medicus , 1970
