Determinants of synaptic information transfer: From Ca²⁺ binding proteins to Ca²⁺ signaling domains

Philippe Isope, Christian D. Wilms, Hartmut Schmidt, 2016-05-26 The cytoplasmic free Ca²⁺ concentration Ca²⁺_i is a key determinant of neuronal information transfer and processing It controls a plethora of fundamental processes including transmitter release and the induction of synaptic plasticity This enigmatic second messenger conveys its wide variety of actions by binding to a subgroup of Ca²⁺ binding proteins CaBPs known as Ca²⁺ sensors Well known examples of Ca²⁺ sensors are Troponin C in skeletal muscle Synaptotagmin in presynaptic terminals and Calmodulin CaM in all eukaryotic cells Since the levels of Ca²⁺_i directly influence the potency of Ca²⁺ sensors the Ca²⁺ concentration is tightly controlled by several mechanisms including another type of Ca²⁺ binding proteins the Ca²⁺ buffers Prominent examples of Ca²⁺ buffers include Parvalbumin PV Calbindin D28k CB and Calretinin CR although for the latter two Ca²⁺ sensor functions were recently also suggested Ca²⁺ buffers are distinct from sensors by their purely buffering action i.e. they influence the spatio-temporal extent of Ca²⁺ signals without directly binding downstream target proteins Details of their action depend on their binding kinetics mobility and concentration Thus neurons can control the range of action of Ca²⁺ by the type and concentration of CaBPs expressed Since buffering strongly limits the range of action of free Ca²⁺ the structure of the Ca²⁺ signaling domain and the topographical relationships between the sites of Ca²⁺ influx and the location of the Ca²⁺ sensors are central determinants in neuronal information processing For example postsynaptic dendritic spines act to compartmentalize Ca²⁺ depending on their geometry and expression of CaBPs thereby influencing dendritic integration At presynaptic sites it has been shown that tight so called nanodomain coupling between Ca²⁺ channels and the sensor for vesicular transmitter release increases speed and reliability of synaptic transmission Vice versa the influence of an individual CaBP on information processing depends on the topographical relationships within the signaling domain If e.g. source and sensor are very close only buffers with rapid binding kinetics can interfere with signaling This Research Topic contains a collection of work dealing with the relationships between different Ca²⁺ controlling mechanisms in the structural context of synaptic sites and their functional implications for synaptic information processing as detailed in the below Editorial

Mobile Communication and Greater China

Rodney Wai-chi Chu, Leopoldina Fortunati, Pui-Lam Law, Shanhua Yang, 2012-05-04 This edited volume is the first book length study focusing entirely on mobile phone use in China Drawing on examples from a wide range of contemporary situations in China and beyond the contributors argue that the mobile phone is in fact an important means by which one can understand a rapidly changing China and the developing culture of mobile phone usage reflects both the cultural norms and struggle of the people Through a theoretical comparison of usage in the West and in China the editors assert the uniqueness of China's experience highlighting that Chinese society is being exposed simultaneously to a rapid process of industrialization and cyberization The contributors maintain that such density of experience under a compressed period combined with a thick cultural heritage and a country still under a dictating rule provides a unique situation and offers deep insights into Chinese culture in general This work will be of great interest to all students and scholars of Asian communication studies ICT and Chinese culture and society
