The Sources of Intentionality Uriah Kriegel, 2014 What do thoughts hopes paintings words desires photographs traffic signs and perceptions have in common They are all about something are directed are contentful in a way chairs and trees for example are not This book inquires into the source of this power of directedness that some items exhibit while others do not An approach to this issue prevalent in the philosophy of the past half century seeks to explain the power of directedness in terms of certain items ability to reliably track things in their environment A very different approach with a venerable history and enjoying a recent resurgence seeks to explain the power of directedness rather in terms of an intrinsic ability of conscious experience to direct itself This book attempts a synthesis of both approaches developing an account of the sources of such directedness that grounds it both in reliable tracking and in conscious experience

The Mind in Virtual Reality Vanja Kljajevic, 2021-07-15 This book is inspired by the contemporary fascination with virtual reality and growing presence of this type of technology in everyday life It explores the ways in which virtual reality evokes illusory transformation responses The power of virtual reality is in making the mediation by technology in these experiences appear irrelevant to cognitive processes so much so that it is often assumed that skills acquired in virtual environments are generally transferable to the physical world However cognition is affected by virtual reality technology which is reflected in issues related to virtual embodiment choice of spatial strategies differences in neural and electrophysiological patterns associated with movement processing when navigating virtual vs physical environments and at least to some extent in virtual proxemics In addition to spatial cognition the book explores the sense of self in virtual reality social interaction and virtual togetherness action and motor cognition calling to mind debates from philosophy psychology and cognitive neuroscience

Children's Early Understanding of Mind Charlie Lewis, Peter Mitchell, 2014-03-18 A major feature of human intelligence is that it allows us to contemplate mental life Such an understanding is vital in enabling us to function effectively in social groups This book examines the origins of this aspect of human intelligence The five sections attempt firstly to place human development within an evolutionary context focusing on the possibility of innate components of understanding The second aim of the book is to examine the roles of early perception pretence and communication as precursor skills in the development of a grasp of mental states Thirdly attention is given to the possibility that children know a good deal more about the mind than is apparent from many studies designed to probe their abilities Taken together the chapters in this book mark a new focus within a theory of mind movement examining a group of skills in infancy and early childhood which culminate towards the end of the preschool period in a more mature understanding of one's and others mental states Drawing together researchers from diverse theoretical positions the aim is to work towards a coherent and unified account of this fundamental human ability This book will be of central relevance to psychologists and those in related disciplines particularly education and philosophy Handbook of Philosophical Logic Dov M. Gabbay, Franz Guenther, 2010-11-25

Rethinking Religious Conversion Jack Williams, 2024-11-14 Drawing on methods from religious studies philosophy and cognitive science Jack Williams develops a unique and interdisciplinary approach to the study of religious conversion This is the first major philosophical study of conversion to treat the phenomenon as a long term process shaped by the convert's embodiment and immersion in a linguistic social and ritual community Williams analysis of the conversion process is rooted in a view of cognition as both embodied and affective and is informed by the latest research in phenomenology affect theory neuroscience and enactivist cognitive science In conversation with diverse conversion narratives he advances a theory of conversion that is not restricted to a modern Western context but that can be applied to experiences of conversion across global history and culture Rethinking Religious Conversion displays an original approach to the philosophical study of diverse religious practices By bringing together a diverse array of contemporary and historical scholarship it revitalizes the study of conversion for both philosophy and religious studies

Consciousness As Representing One's Mind Richard Brown, 2025 The science of consciousness is now at the point where we need to evaluate the theories of consciousness currently on offer Higher order theories of consciousness having originated in philosophy rather than science are at this point not well understood Even worse it is often not clear what would or would not count as an empirical test of these kinds of theories Richard Brown here carefully presents and defends a novel higher order theory of consciousness and compares it to the existing theories with an emphasis on empirical falsification Brown affectionately calls his novel theory the HOROR Higher Order Representation of a Representation theory After presenting and defending the HOROR theory he turns to situating this theory in the contemporary landscape of higher order theories Throughout he emphasizes the extent to which empirical results would constitute a challenge to higher order theories Along the way he develops a new taxonomy for higher order theories and uses it to classify the existing varieties of higher order theories

The Sources of Husserl's 'Ideas I' Andrea Staiti, Evan Clarke, 2018-05-07 Despite an ever growing scholarly interest in the work of Edmund Husserl and in the history of the phenomenological movement much of the contemporaneous scholarly context surrounding Husserl's work remains shrouded in darkness While much has been written about the critiques of Husserl's work associated with Heidegger Levinas and Sartre comparatively little is known of the debates that Husserl was directly involved in The present volume addresses this gap in scholarship by presenting a comprehensive selection of contemporaneous responses to Husserl's work Ranging in date from 1906 to 1917 these texts bookend Husserl's landmark Ideas for a Pure Phenomenology and

Phenomenological Philosophy 1913 The selection encompasses essays that Husserl responded to directly in the Ideas I as well as a number of the critical and sympathetic essays that appeared in the wake of its publication Significantly the present volume also includes Husserl's subsequent responses to his critics All of the texts included have been translated into English for the first time introducing the reader to a wide range of long neglected material that is highly relevant to contemporary debates regarding the meaning and possibility of phenomenology Cause, Mind, and Reality J. Heil, 2013-11-11 It is said that there is no progress in philosophy The illusion of standing still however arises only when we lose sight of our history and so fail to notice the distance we have travelled Philosophers nowadays find obvious ideas and themes that as it happens emerged slowly and painfully and largely in reaction to prevailing sensibilities The essays here honour a man to whom present day philosophy owes much Charles Burton Martin In reflecting on my own on going and somewhat chaotic philosophical education I find considerable evidence of Charlie Martin's influence After departing graduate school one of the first papers I succeeded in publishing consisted of an attack on Martin and Deutsch's Remembering After that Charlie more or less vanished from my conscious awareness until the winter of 1985 when we appeared together in a colloquium at the Eastern Division meetings of the American Philosophical Association Although Charlie was nominally a commentator on a paper I was delivering his comments contained more philosophy and went considerably beyond the tentative and highly circumscribed thesis I had elected to defend Whereas my focus had been on a tiny feature of Hilary Putnam's argument against realism Charlie went straight for the jugular addressing matters that immediately took us into deep water A Refutation of Positivism in Philosophy of Mind Pieter A.M. Seuren, 2023-05-05 This book argues that positivism though now the dominant paradigm for both the natural and the human sciences is intrinsically unfit for the latter In particular it is unfit for linguistics and cognitive science where it is ultimately self destructive since it fails to account for causality while the mind the primary object of research of the human sciences cannot be understood unless considered to be an autonomous causal force Author Pieter Albertus Maria Seuren who died shortly after this manuscript was finished and after a remarkable career reviews the history of this issue since the seventeenth century He focuses on Descartes Leibniz British Empiricism and Kant arguing that neither cognition nor language can be adequately accounted for unless the mind is given its full due This implies that a distinction must be made following Alexius Meinong but against Russell and Quine between actual and virtual reality The latter is a product of the causally active mind and a necessary ingredient for the setting up of mental models without which neither cognition nor language can function Mental models are coherent sets of propositions and can be wholly or partially true or false Positivism rules out mental models blocking any serious semantics and thereby reducing both language and cognition to caricatures of themselves Seuren presents a causal theory of meaning linking up language with cognition and solving the old question of what meaning actually amounts to Key Features Provides a fundamental reassessment of the methodology of the humanities Makes a distinctive contribution to the conceptual foundations of linguistics and philosophy of mind Explores the philosophical and historical origins of central developments in the human sciences in the past 100 years Offers a new approach to ontology and epistemology in the scientific study of the creative human mind and its products Mind ,1878
